Emotions and Leadership in Organizations and Educational Institutes Osman Titrek, Anna Stavicka, Ana Campina, Gozde Sezen-Gultekin, Carlos Francisco De Sousa Reis, 2023-11-28 Emotion management is an important source of social capital and synergy for organizations Managers have a great role in the creation of this synergy A manager who can cope with their emotions indirectly contributes to organizational effectiveness This situation is especially important in human oriented organizations providing services rather than goods such as educational institutions Leadership is a process of social influence which maximizes the efforts of others towards the achievement of a goal Leadership stems from social influence rather than authority or power In terms of system approach the input output process and feedback of educational organizations are always related to human behaviors Therefore organizations must address the nature of human beings in all of their managerial processes Although organizations in which people are at the foreground try to continue their functioning on a rational and formal basis throughout the managerial process they sometimes have to manage emotional and informal phenomena In this case there is a need for managers and school leaders who can shape the rationale in line with the requirements of human nature What is expected from this administrator is that they do not ignore human needs and emotions while providing the management of educational institutions For this reason these managers should be leaders rather than executives who only work in a formal framework of organization management Moreover principals and teachers should also be leaders in all educational processes Emotions are the main catalyst of positive organizational culture Leaders can create an effective organizational culture with the main source of positive emotions between employers Positive emotions also motivate employees for organizational purposes If a leader wishes to create and maintain an effective organizational culture it is essential to support positive behavior and emotional climate in their institutes and schools Leaders school managers and teachers therefore need to develop emotion management abilities Educational organizations need to shape their organizational culture climate and psychology to support their leaders in efficiently managing their employees emotions Up to now this topic has been usually addressed as the main catalyst and a sub dimension of emotional intelligence Moreover current evidence classifies social and empathy skills as other sub dimensions of emotional intelligence For this reason this collection of peer reviewed articles will draw attention to the contemporary term emotional management and contribute to educational fields by means of exploring the relationship between emotions and leadership

Quality of Work Life According to Teachers BetsAnn Smith,1994 The Work Lives of Urban Teachers Antoinette Shervonne Mitchell,1996 The Effects of Teachers' Workplace Experiences on Their Beliefs about Teacher Role in Curriculum and Instructional Change Virginia Louise Miller,2000 Purpose The purpose of the study was to explore the relationship between teachers experience in the workplace outside of school and their perceptions of the need for a curriculum that is more relevant to workplace demands and instruction that is more problem and experience based Additionally the relationship between changed beliefs and changed classroom practices was examined Specific research questions developed for the study were the following 1 Do teacher participants in a worksite placement change their beliefs about the need to make curriculum more relevant to workplace needs 2 Do teacher participants in a worksite placement change their beliefs about the need to make instruction more problem and experience based 3 Do changed beliefs about curriculum and instruction lead to reported changes in classroom practices If so what new curricular changes and or instructional practices are reportedly applied in the classroom 4 If the practices of some teachers change what are the factors that influenced the changed practices Procedures Participants in the study were a sample of 17 Grade 5 12 teachers from a total population of 85 teachers Grade K 12 who took part in a two week worksite placement outside of school All teachers completed a survey three times over several months and were interviewed twice Hypothesis testing was applied to written survey data gathered from three survey administrations This methodology was used to determine if teachers underwent changes in beliefs about curriculum and instruction subsequent to experiencing the intervention The survey items were selected to identify particular areas of change relating to implicit desirable outcomes of the intervention Qualitative data were obtained through structured interviews and analyzed using thematic analysis to determine if changed beliefs led to reported changed curricular and instructional practices in the classroom Additionally interview questions explored the factors that either promoted or inhibited change based on self reported responses of the participants Results From analysis of both the quantitative and qualitative data it appears that the intervention did have an effect on participants and their beliefs about the need to make curriculum more relevant to workplace demands and instruction more problem and experience based By being immersed in the work environment the participants directly experienced applications of the subjects they teach and were able to bring those back to the classroom along with workplace performance expectations Participants also reported incorporating authentic learning approaches into their instruction and assessment However a comparison of data also indicated that authentic approaches to teaching and assessment coexisted with practices such as lecture and paper and pencil tests Theme ,2014 EDRA.
