

Understanding Diabetes

Glucose metabolism

Glucose is the main source of energy for the body's cells. It is transported in the blood from the liver to the cells. In the cells, glucose is broken down into pyruvate, which is then used to produce energy. The liver also stores glucose as glycogen and releases it into the blood when needed.

Glucagon signals the liver to convert glycogen to glucose and release the glucose into the blood.

Function of insulin

Insulin is a hormone that allows glucose to enter the cells. It is produced by the beta cells of the pancreas. In people with diabetes, the pancreas does not produce enough insulin or the cells do not respond to it properly.

Action of insulin

Type I

In Type I diabetes, the pancreas produces very little insulin. This means that glucose cannot enter the cells, and it builds up in the blood.

Type II

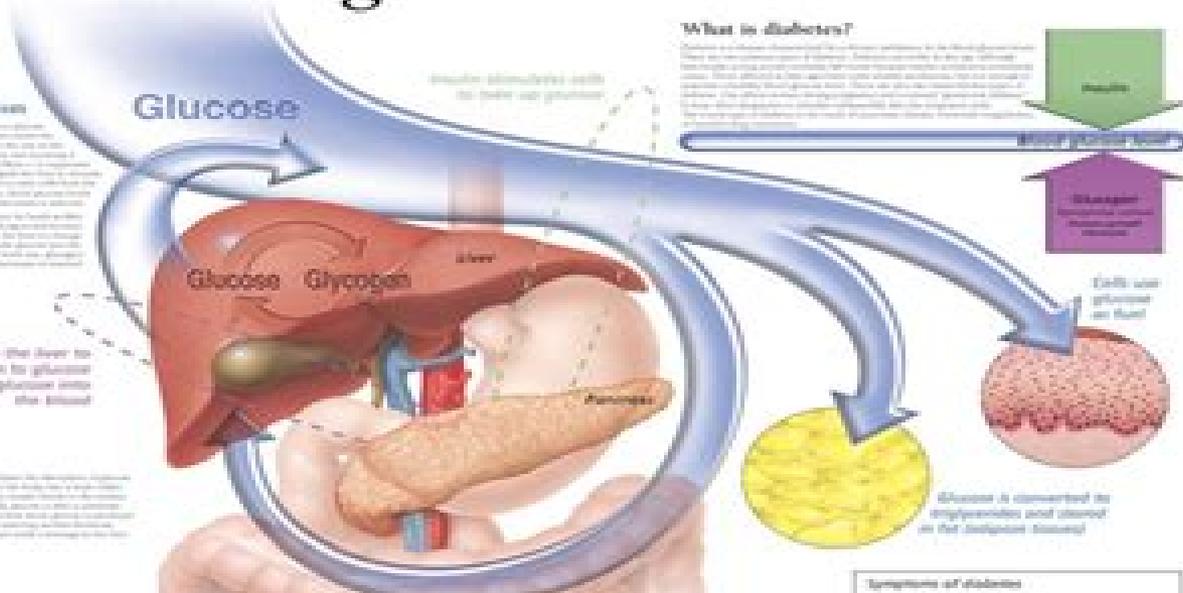

In Type II diabetes, the cells do not respond properly to insulin. This means that even though there is enough insulin, glucose cannot enter the cells.

Normal

The pancreas produces enough insulin and the cells respond properly to it. Glucose enters the cells and is used for energy.

What is diabetes?

Diabetes is a chronic condition that affects the way your body uses blood sugar (glucose). It is caused by either the pancreas not producing enough insulin or the cells in your body not responding properly to the insulin that is produced.

- ### Symptoms of diabetes
- Increased thirst and hunger
 - Frequent urination
 - Blurred vision
 - Slow-healing sores
 - Tingling or numbness in hands and feet
 - Unexplained fatigue, weight loss, and mood changes

Health complications

Kidney damage

Diabetes can damage the kidneys over time. The kidneys filter waste from the blood. In people with diabetes, the kidneys may become inflamed and scarred, which can lead to kidney failure.

Vision problems

Diabetes can affect the eyes. High blood sugar can damage the blood vessels in the retina, which is the part of the eye that senses light. This can lead to vision loss.

Heart disease

Diabetes increases the risk of heart disease. High blood sugar can damage the blood vessels in the heart, leading to heart attacks and strokes.

Nerve damage

Diabetes can damage the nerves in the body. This is called neuropathy. It can cause pain, tingling, and numbness, especially in the hands and feet.

Treatment and healthy lifestyle changes

There are several ways to manage diabetes. These include taking medication, eating a healthy diet, and getting regular exercise. It is important to work with your healthcare provider to create a treatment plan that is right for you.
