FOOD AND NUTRITION Dr. Shivaveerakumar S, Dr. (Smt.) Jyothi Hiremath, 2023-07-06

According to the information that we learned in the first unit the primary objective of public nutrition is to investigate and develop responses to the nutritional challenges faced by people We also came to the realization that in order to solve the nutritional problems that a population is experiencing it is necessary to have competence in a broad variety of academic subjects as well as the involvement of a wide variety of professional sectors Therefore policies and programs that are designed to address dietary and nutrition concerns may base their solutions on areas of research that are much beyond the traditional boundaries of nutrition For instance determining the nutritional efficacy of a supplemental feeding program or attempting to forecast the nutritional repercussions of a shift in pricing regulations can call for contributions from a variety of fields including economics and behavioral sciences amongst others Another example would be attempting to determine the nutritional repercussions of a shift in pricing regulations During the course of this session we are going to study the many different aspects that play a role in nutritional deficit In addition we will look at the many ways that are used by the several subfields of information technology as well as the connections that exist between these diverse methodologies We will limit the scope of this lesson to the role that agriculture plays and the worries that are related with it since there are many other areas of study that need to be included in the solution to the problems of hunger In this lesson you will investigate how the production of food in agricultural and horticultural contexts as well as its transportation and storage impact the total food consumption and nutritional state of a community Specifically you will look at how these factors interact with one another In addition we will study the ways in which the application of science and technology to agricultural practices could lead to an increase in the production of crops that can be consumed In addition the course will provide an explanation of the concept of food and nutrition security as well as the ways in which various characteristics such as economic status gender and so on
