The Republic of Technology Daniel Joseph Boorstin,1978 The Technological Republic Alexander C. Karp,Nicholas W. Zamiska,2025-02-18 INSTANT 1 NEW YORK TIMES BESTSELLER AN NPR BEST BOOK OF THE YEAR A cri de coeur that takes aim at the tech industry for abandoning its history of helping America and its allies The Wall Street Journal From the Palantir co founder one of Time s 100 Most Influential People of 2025 and his deputy a critically acclaimed and sweeping indictment of the West s culture of complacency arguing that timid leadership intellectual fragility and an unambitious view of technology s potential in Silicon Valley have made the U S vulnerable in an era of mounting global threats Not since Allan Bloom s astonishingly successful 1987 book The Closing of the American Mind has there been a cultural critique as sweeping George F Will The Washington Post Provocative worthy of your time Edith Chapin former Editor in Chief of NPR Silicon Valley has lost its way Our most brilliant engineering minds once collaborated with government to advance world changing technologies Their efforts secured the West s dominant place in the geopolitical order But that relationship has now eroded with perilous repercussions Today the market rewards shallow engagement with the potential of technology Engineers and founders build photo sharing apps and marketing algorithms unwittingly becoming vessels for the ambitions of others This complacency has spread into academia politics and the boardroom The result An entire generation for whom the narrow minded pursuit of the demands of a late capitalist economy has become their calling In this groundbreaking treatise Palantir co founder and CEO Alexander C Karp and Nicholas W Zamiska offer a searing critique of our collective abandonment of ambition arguing that in order for the U S and its allies to retain their global edge and preserve the freedoms we take for granted the software industry must renew its commitment to addressing our most urgent challenges including the new arms race of artificial intelligence The government in turn must embrace the most effective features of the engineering mindset that has propelled Silicon Valley s success Above all our leaders must reject intellectual fragility and preserve space for ideological confrontation A willingness to risk the disapproval of the crowd Karp and Zamiska contend has everything to do with technological and economic outperformance At once iconoclastic and rigorous this book also lifts the veil on Palantir and its broader political project from the inside offering a passionate call for the West to wake up to our new reality The Republic of Technology Daniel Joseph Boorstin,1978 Mapping research and innovation in the Republic of Malawi Lemarchand, Guillermo A.,Schneegans, Susan,2014-11-13 Mapping Research and Innovation in the Republic of Mozambique Kahn, Michael,UNESCO,2021-02-09 Climate change, agriculture, and adaptation in the Republic of Korea to 2050 Cenacchi, Nicola,Lin, Youngaha,Sulser, Timothy B.,Islam, Shahnila,Mason-D'Croze, Daniel,Kim, Chang-Gil,Wiebe, Keith D.,2016-12-16 As the effects of climate change set in and population and income growth exert increasing pressure on natural resources food security is becoming a pressing challenge for countries worldwide Awareness of these threats is critical to transforming concern into long term planning and modeling tools like the one used in the present study are beneficial for strategic support of decision making in the agricultural policy arena The focus of this investigation is the Republic of Korea where economic growth has resulted in large shifts in diet in recent decades in parallel with a decline in both arable land and agricultural production and a tripling of agricultural imports compared to the early 2000s Although these are recognized as traits of a rapidly growing economy officials and experts in the country recognize that the trends expose the Republic of Korea to climate change shocks and fluctuations in the global food market This study uses the IMPACT International Model for Policy Analysis of Agricultural Commodities and Trade economic model to investigate possible future trends of both domestic food production and dependence on food imports as well as the effects from adoption of agricultural practices consistent with a climate change adaptation strategy The goal is to help assess the prospects for sustaining improvements in food security and possibly inform the national debate on agricultural policy Results show that historical trends of harvested area and imports may continue into the future under climate change Although crop models suggest negative long term impacts of climate change on rice yield in the Republic of Korea the economic model simulations show that intrinsic productivity growth and market effects have the potential to limit the magnitude of losses rice production and yield are projected to keep growing between 2010 and 2050 with a larger boost when adoption of improved technologies is taken into consideration At the same time food production and net exports from the country s major trading partners are also projected to increase although diminished by climate change effects In sum these results show that kilocalorie availability will keep growing in the Republic of Korea and although climate change may have some impact by reducing the overall availability the effect does not appear strong enough to have significant consequences on projected trends of increasing food security
