

UNDERSTANDING ALLERGIES

What Is An Allergy?

An allergy is an overreaction or hypersensitivity of the body's immune system to normally harmless substances, called allergens. An allergic reaction occurs when the body's immune system responds to an allergen as if the substance were disease-causing. Subsequent responses to this substance can result in physical symptoms that range from mild to severe.

Who Gets Allergies?

The tendency to develop allergies is thought to be inherited, because they commonly develop in those who have a family history of allergies. It is possible for anyone to develop allergies at any age. Allergies often occur in people who have other allergic conditions. This could mean slight allergies in people with no family history or lesions developed in those with a family history.

What Are Common Allergens?

Allergens can enter the body in a number of different ways, including inhaling pollen, drinking, ingesting (as with hot sauce), and contact with the skin or eyes. Common allergens include pollen, mold, animal hair or dander, dust mites, certain medications like penicillin, petroleum, and certain foods like peanuts, grains, eggs, milk, wheat, and soybeans.

Anaphylaxis: An Allergic Emergency

Anaphylaxis is a life-threatening reaction. The onset of this reaction may occur within minutes or minutes of exposure. Symptoms can include a rash with some redness of the face, skin becoming itchy to the touch, swollen lips and tongue, and swelling of the throat, making breathing difficult, and there is a drop in blood pressure. Swelling can stop and the body may stop reacting, but medication to get additional swelling down before and death can occur. Anaphylaxis is the most severe allergic reaction and is life-threatening and medication such as antihistamines are more likely to cause complications than any other allergen. Anaphylaxis is not a common reaction and can be controlled with prompt medical attention. The help of a physician.

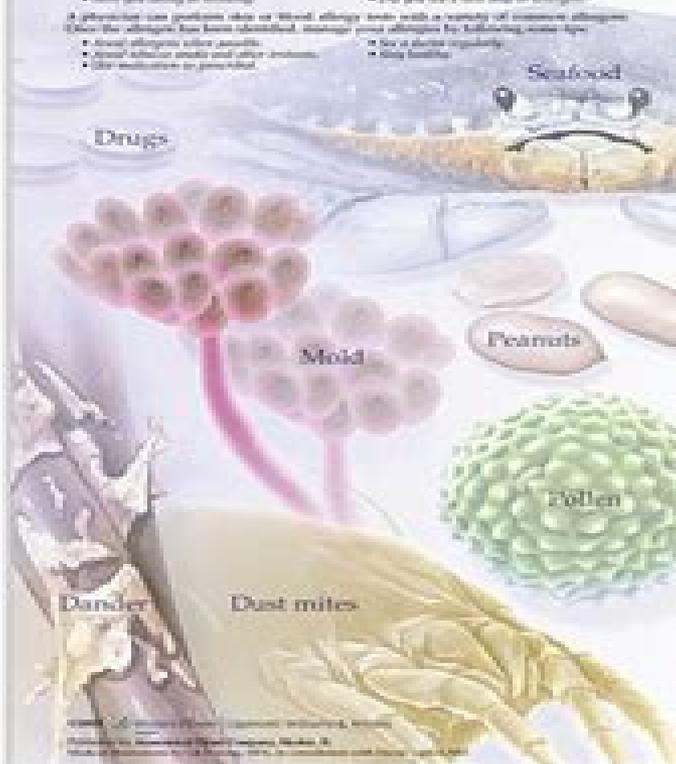

Managing Allergies

The first step in managing allergies is to identify the type of reaction you are having, whether it is an acute, chronic, or difficulty breathing, asthma, try to identify the trigger in the reaction that led to the symptoms. Ask yourself a few questions:

- Did you eat anything new?
- Did you use any new medicine?
- Did you get a new pet?
- Did you go outside?
- Did you get a new job or hobby?
- Did you get a new car or truck?
- Did you get a new pet?
- Did you get a new job or hobby?

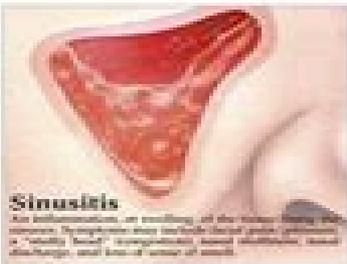

A physician can perform skin or blood allergy tests with a variety of common allergens. Once the allergen has been identified, manage your allergies by following some tips:

- Avoid allergen when possible.
- Use a doctor regularly.
- Avoid allergen when possible.
- Stay healthy.
- Use medication as prescribed.
