

A Brief History of Whaling

EARLY HUNTING

3000 BCE: Whaling was practiced by Inuit peoples and others in the North Atlantic and North Pacific oceans.

17TH CENTURY:

Smeerenburg ("Blubbertown") was built on Spitsbergen after 1619. During its heyday in the 1630s and '40s, the settlement had 150 men servicing whalers that hunted the whales in the surrounding Arctic Ocean.

Arctic bay whaling ended in the mid-1650s because of the onset of a miniature ice age that lasted for the rest of the 17th century.

1000 BCE: The Basques caught northern right whales that gathered to breed in the Bay of Biscay.

1850s:

The quarry of slow-moving 1850s-era vessels was sperm whales (Physeter catodon) and right whales (family Balaenidae, four species).

MODERN ERA

1950s TO 1980s:

Larger 1950s-era vessels allowed for greater range as well as the capability to process hunted whales at sea.

Floating factories made it possible to process a 100-ton blue whale (Balaenoptera musculus) in one hour.

Carcasses were winched up onto an open butchering deck via a slipway through the stern.

Modern vessels were equipped with helicopters and diesel engines, which allowed whalers to locate and overtake faster quarry.

THE PRESENT:

Minke whales (Balaenoptera acutorostrata and B. bonaerensis) are frequently listed as the quarry of Iceland, Norway, and Japan—the last remaining whaling countries—for food and research. Nearly 200 minke whales per year are harvested by aboriginal peoples in Greenland.
