He was evidently so good natured however that he accepted the inglorious hour for what it was worth. Paul Overt shared it with him and with his companions for the next twenty minutes the latter looked at him and he looked at them without knowing much who they were while the talk went on without much telling him even what it meant. It seemed indeed to mean nothing in particular it wandered with casual pointless pauses and short terrestrial flights amid names of persons and places names which for our friend had no great power of evocation. It was all sociable and slow as was right and natural of a warm Sunday morning. His first attention was given to the question privately considered of whether one of the two younger men would be Henry St George. He knew many of his distinguished contemporaries by their photographs but had never as happened seen a portrait of the great misguided novelist. One of the gentlemen was unimaginable he was too young and the other scarcely looked clever enough with such mild indiscriminating eyes. If those eyes were St George's the problem presented by the ill matched parts of his genius would be still more difficult of solution. Besides the deportment of their proprietor was not as regards the lady in the red dress such as could be natural toward the wife of his bosom even to a writer accused by several critics of sacrificing too much to manner. Lastly Paul Overt had a vague sense that if the gentleman with the expressionless eyes bore the name that had set his heart beating faster he also had contradictory conventional whiskers the young admirer of the celebrity had never in a mental vision seen his face in so vulgar a frame he would have given him a sign of recognition or of friendliness would have heard of him a little would know something about Ginistrella would have an impression of how that fresh fiction had caught the eye of real criticism. Paul Overt had a dread of being grossly proud but even morbid modesty might view the authorship of Ginistrella as constituting a degree of identity. His soldierly friend became clear enough he was Fancourt but was also the General and he mentioned to the new visitor in the course of a few moments that he had but lately returned from twenty years service abroad.

written my books Exemplifying Henry James's famous belief that Art makes life The Lesson of the Master is a piercing study of the life that art makes When the tale's protagonist a gifted young writer meets and befriends a famous author he has long idolized he is both repelled by and attracted to the artist's great secret the emotional costs of a life dedicated to art With extraordinary psychological insight and devastating wit the novella asks the question of whether art is ultimately demeaning or ennobling for the artist while capturing the ambiguities of a life devoted to art and the choices artists must make The expatriate James knew these choices well by the time he published the novella in the Universal Review in 1888 and the work reveals him at the height of his powers
