and film. It's given him a broad experience as a writer in the various aspects of the writing business. In particular, he has been able to see submissions from over 10,000 writers that's about 3 per working day on average that he chose not to publish. That's right, he's rejected 10,000 manuscripts. Sometimes reluctantly, sometimes with relief or shock or despair or frustration. But always for a reason. He doesn't like to reject a manuscript. No publisher does. It gives them no pleasure indeed, it's finding that rare diamond of a book in the slush pile that they get excited about among other things, of course. That's why he wrote How to be a Writer to explain the essential difference between the authors who get rejected time after time and those who end up on a short list for further consideration and ultimately get accepted. In fact, the difference isn't a vast uncrossable gulf between amateurs and professionals. It's something that any moderately competent writer can fix with the simple ten-stage plan outlined in this book. Together with industry secrets and insider tips designed to give any writer a leg up the ladder of success, this book is essential reading for anyone who wants to see their name in print on TV or the big screen or mentioned on the radio. There are some harsh truths exposed in this book, and many myths will be shattered. The reality of writing is not what many people believe it to be. Some of these chapters may surprise or disappoint you. The aim in revealing the secrets of the writing game is not to destroy your ambitions and dreams but to empower you to be able to achieve them. Use this book as a reality check before embarking on a career as a writer. Use it to inspire you to achieve high standards, greatness, and professionalism. Without those, you have nothing. With them, you can conquer the literary world.

Pen on Fire Barbara DeMarco-Barrett, 2004-10-04. In her fifteen years of teaching, Barbara DeMarco Barrett has found that the biggest stumbling block for aspiring writers, especially women, is not fear of the blank page but frustration with the lack of time. What woman doesn't have too much to do and too little time? Finding an hour free of work, children, or obligations can seem impossible. But anyone can find fifteen minutes, whether you're sitting in traffic waiting at a child's soccer practice or watching the coffee drip. DeMarco Barrett has created a practical, inspirational guide for fitting serious writing into those stolen moments. She offers writing exercises and techniques for generating ideas, as well as pragmatic advice from the well-known authors who appear on her radio show. With fifteen minutes a day, she can help you to ignite your pen and become the writer you have always wanted to be.
