Hill Whitmore The result of this invitation was that author Julius Charles Birge embarked on an expedition with six of his friends as well as others invited for the trip Starting from their home in Wisconsin they travelled through the Missouri River and then moved westwards through various states ultimately ending up in the western states of Oregon and California before circling back to the middle in Kansas state The book is his travel memoir for the journey and it provides an excellent look at early nineteenth century American life culture and geography      Erlinthule, king Ithol and the lyrics of the greenwood
