Plot Outline

Rachel Dove a British missionary's daughter who has been trekked almost all her young life around the wilds of Africa while her father preaches the Good Word to the natives and her mother suffers silently Her life is turned around when fellow teenager Richard Darrien rescues her from a flash flood their common initials alone may clue the reader in that these two are another pair of Haggard's predestined lovers Some years later however Rachel not having seen Richard during all that intervening time runs afoul of one of the author's patented lustful villains Ishmael a renegade Englishman who plots with the Zulu king to have Rachel for his own This task is made complicated for the rogue when the Zulus come to view Rachel as their Inkosazana y Zoola or Great Lady of the Heavens the embodiment and incarnation of their goddess Rachel accompanied by Noie her faithful half Zulu attendant discovers a lost civilisation the Ghost Kings a dwarf like tribe of tree worshippers who are able to peer into the future with their bowls of dew Similarly Ishmael who practically goes insane with lust over the beautiful Rachel

Once more we have the presentation of a girl of wonderful charm who through no desire of her own is endowed with mystical properties by the superstitious natives Mr Rider Haggard doubtless knows more of the Zulus than any other writer of our day and he introduces here a picture of that nation under Dingaan which is both vivid and convincing Their dealings with the heroine her love and the renegade European who lives with them form some of the chief incidents of the book but it is the love story of the mysterious maiden of her wanderings in the land of the Ghost Kings surely one of the weirdest regions Mr Haggard has ever imagined of the search of her lover for her and of their reunion after many strange adventures which make up a romance of exciting and fascinating interest
