States of America

Unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America

When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth a separate and equal station, it is their right, it is their duty, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, that whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such Principles and organizing its Powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Liberty. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object, evinces a design to reduce them to absolute Tyranny, it is their duty to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security. — Such has been the patient Sufferance of these Colonies, that they have long endured a Train of such Abuses and Usurpations, that a moderate Course of Reform appears now to be unattainable in a mild way. We therefore the Representatives of the united States of America, in General Congress assembled, solemnly publish and declare, that the thirteen united States of America are, and of Right ought to be, free and independent States; that they are absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political Connections with them are hereby totally dissolved; that as to the future, they do, and of Right ought to, exercise independent Power, Peace, Amity, Alliance, or Commerce, with any other State, or States, as they shall see Cause; and for the support of this Declaration, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes, and our sacred Honor.
