OH BOY! WHAT WILL THEY DO NEXT?

A long time ago, about 10,000 BC, there was home science...

Hi! That tasted good!

You think he'll run away?

...and even appropriate technology

Sh! the devil helps him

The earliest civilisations used many engineering concepts...

but physics - a scientific method that attempts to explain nature based on a set of laws - probably did not exist till the time of the Greeks.

Greece produced many thinkers and scholars: like Pythagoras (582 - 497 BC)

I think I've got it at last

...who conducted experiments in harmony by plucking strings. When there was a simple ratio like 2:3 and 1:2 between the lengths a and b, the tune was pleasant

With more complicated ratios, the results were not harmonious

By Zeus! Pytho must be trying 409:420

These Pythagoreans are crazy

Zeno, a contemporary of Pythagoras, nearly proved that motion is impossible (Zeno's paradox)

Look here: Suppose Achilles and a tortoise run a race, with the tortoise having a ten-foot start. By the time Achilles covers that distance the tortoise would be a little ahead; when Achilles covers that, the tortoise would advance a little further. So Achilles can never catch up with the tortoise

That's too complicated

Nevertheless, it moves

Probably you're ahead of your times

Democritus (~ 400 BC) tried to resolve Zeno's paradox by suggesting that matter is not infinitely divisible

All matter is made of atoms

About 400 BC
