Locke,2015-07-11 Excerpt from The Mountebank In the month of June 1919 I received a long letter from Brigadier General Andrew Lackaday together with a bulky manuscript The letter addressed from an obscure hotel in Marseilles ran as follows My dear Friend On the occasion of our last meeting when I kept you up to an ungodly hour of the morning with the story of my wretched affairs to which you patiently listened without seeming bored you were good enough to suggest that I might write a book about myself not for the sake of vulgar advertisement but in order to interest perhaps to encourage at any rate to stimulate the thoughts of many of my old comrades who have been placed in the same predicament as myself Well I can t do it You re a professional man of letters and don t appreciate the extraordinary difficulty a layman has not only in writing a coherent narrative but in composing the very sentences which express the things that he wants to convey Add to this that English is to me if not a foreign at any rate a secondary language I have thought all my life in French so that to express myself clearly on any except the humdrum affairs of life is always a conscious effort Even this little prelude in my best style has taken me nearly two cigarettes to write so I gave up an impossible task But I thought to myself that perhaps you might have the time or the interest to put into shape a whole mass of raw material which I have slung together from memory I have a good one and from my diary It may seem odd that a homeless Bohemian like myself should have kept a diary but I was born methodical I believe my mastery of Army Forms gained me my promotion Anyhow you will find in it a pretty complete history of my career up to date About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do

Acrobats and Mountebanks Hugues Le Roux, Jules Garnier, 1890 The Making of the Dentiste, C. 1650-1760 Roger King, 2017-07-05 The early decades of the eighteenth century saw the appearance of a completely new type of surgical practitioner in France the dentiste The use of this title was of the utmost significance indicating not just the making of a new practitioner but of an entirely new practice the dentiste was quite literally making a name for himself Appearing on the back of dramatic changes within surgery in general the practice of the dentiste although it focused only on the teeth was nevertheless extensive In addition to extractions there was also a wide ranging field of operations on offer the performance of which had only been hinted at by the surgeon of the seventeenth century This new sphere of practice represented a radical departure from what had gone before and as this book reveals it was all built solidly on sound surgical foundations with the dentiste occupying a respected position within society in general and the medical world in particular This book places the making of the dentiste within social political and technical contexts and in so doing re contextualises the purely progressive stories told in conventional histories of dentistry In doing so it brings surgery back to its central role in this story and reveals for the first time the origins of the dentise in the French surgical profession The Mountebank's Children
