

Hypothesis test for the population mean: t test using the p value method

Tammy recently switched her primary doctor to one specializing in caring for elderly patients. On her new doctor's website, it says that the mean systolic blood pressure among elderly females is 115 millimeters of mercury (mmHg). Tammy believes the value is actually higher. She bases her belief on a recently reported study of 14 randomly selected, elderly females. The sample mean systolic blood pressure was 128 mmHg, and the sample standard deviation was 23 mmHg.

Assume that the systolic blood pressures of elderly females are approximately normally distributed. Based on the study, at the 0.10 level of significance, can it be concluded that μ , the population mean systolic blood pressure among elderly females, is greater than 115 mmHg?

Perform a one-tailed test. Then complete the parts below.

Carry your intermediate computations to three or more decimal places. (If necessary, consult a list of formulas.)

(a) State the null hypothesis H_0 and the alternative hypothesis H_1 .

$$H_0: \mu = 115$$

$$H_1: \mu > 115$$

$$\mu = 115$$

$$\bar{x} = 128$$

$$\sigma = 23$$

$$n = 14$$

$$df = 14 - 1 = 13$$

(b) Determine the type of test statistic to use.

(Choose one)

(c) Find the value of the test statistic. (Round to three or more decimal places.)

$$2.115$$

$$\frac{128 - 115}{23} \approx 2.115$$

(d) Find the p-value. (Round to three or more decimal places.)

$$0.027$$

$$\sqrt{14}$$

$$P(t > 2.115 \text{ with } df = 13) \approx$$

(e) Can it be concluded that the mean systolic blood pressure among elderly females is greater than 115 mmHg?

Yes No

$$0.027$$

Climate Sensitive Adaptation in Health Purnamita Dasgupta, 2016-07-26 This book focuses on the risks that climate change poses for the health sector. It discusses the current vulnerabilities to climate sensitive diseases, the resultant mortality and morbidity in human populations, the projected risks in connection with increasing global warming, and the options for tackling the adverse impacts of climate change. Adapting to climate change so as to effectively address the risks for and adverse impacts on the health sector requires an in-depth understanding of current deficits in health sector preparedness for climate sensitive illnesses, as well as future plans and programs for increasing adaptive capacity and building resilience. The book situates climate and health adaptation concerns in the broader context of developing countries, providing insights that can be useful for other countries as well, helping them further their health adaptation efforts. In India, poverty and inadequate access to basic water, health, and sanitation services combine with climate-related events to adversely impact health outcomes. Three case studies on the occurrence of heat stress, flooding, and extreme cyclonic events in India are presented, along with a critical assessment of the level of preparedness and capacity of healthcare facilities to respond to the threats posed by climate change. The book presents the key challenges faced in reducing the risks posed to the health sector by climatic factors and highlights the most important opportunities for promoting resilience and adaptation to achieve sustainable development. Dr. Dasgupta's excellent book reviews the health risks of climate change, outlines an operational framework for health adaptation, and describes the socioeconomic context for adaptation in India. Kristie L. Ebi, Professor, Departments of Global Health and Environmental and Occupational Health Sciences, University of Washington, USA. This pioneering work contributes to an understanding of the preparedness in India to manage health risks from such climate change on the basis of detailed data analysis, both from large national surveys and contextualized field-based surveys. This foundational approach includes how corporatization, population changes, poverty, and the role of data affect everyday learning in rural schools. In following sections, the contributors consider how school closures, charter schools, and district governance influence decision-making in rural schooling, while also examining the influence of these structures on higher education attainment, rural school partnerships, and school leadership. They explore curriculum studies in rural education, including place-based and trauma-informed pedagogies, rural literacies, rural stereotype threat, and achievement. Finally, they engage with issues of identity and equity in rural schools by providing an overview of the literature related to diverse populations in rural places, including Indigenous Black and Latinx communities and exceptional learners. Importantly, this handbook applies theoretical tools to rural classroom experiences, demonstrating the potential of work
