

The Legend of Sleepy Hollow

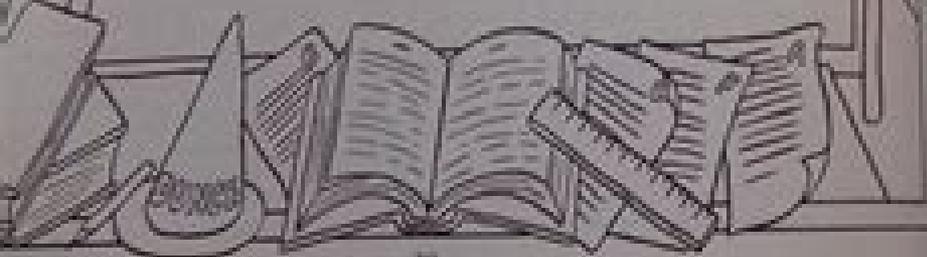

Ichabod Crane was a schoolmaster in the Dutch Village in the state of New York. He was a highly educated man who was often called the "schoolmaster" of the village. He was tall and thin, and he was known for his long nose. He was a very good teacher, and he was very kind to his students. He was also a very good friend to his neighbors. He was a very good man, and he was a very good teacher.

One day in September Ichabod was returning from a party. He was riding his horse, and he was carrying a bundle of books. He was riding along the road, and he was looking at the stars. He was looking at the stars, and he was looking at the stars. He was looking at the stars, and he was looking at the stars.

As he rode along the road, he saw a head in the road and the shape of a horse. He was looking at the head, and he was looking at the horse. He was looking at the head, and he was looking at the horse. He was looking at the head, and he was looking at the horse.

The next day Ichabod was riding. The townspeople searched for him and found his horse at the church and bits of a smashed jacket. They were looking for him, and they were looking for him. They were looking for him, and they were looking for him.

Guide Ichabod and his quaking horse out of the hollow, across the stone bridge and to the church without encountering any of the specters, especially the Headless Horseman.
