

Chapter 1

Theoretical and Practical Issues in ESL Writing

Questions for Reflection

- What do you remember about the primary language writing instruction you received during your primary, secondary, college, or even graduate education? What were the principal features of the method or methods used by your instructors?
- What aspects of that writing instruction contributed most (or least) to your expertise as a writer in your primary language? Why?
- In your experience as a writer, have you become aware of any explicit or implicit theories of writing that might have motivated the instruction you received? Were there any instances in your formal education in which writing teachers exposed their philosophy concerning the teaching of writing? If so, what were the stated principles and how did they influence your learning?
- If you have received formal instruction in a foreign or second language, were you provided training as a writer of that language? If so, compare that experience to your experience as an apprentice writer in your primary language. Describe specific similarities and differences.
