The Irish Voice in America Charles Fanning, In this study Charles Fanning has written the first general account of the origins and development of a literary tradition among American writers of Irish birth or background who have explored the Irish immigrant or ethnic experience in works of fiction. The result is a portrait of the evolving fictional self-consciousness of an immigrant group over a span of 250 years. Fanning traces the roots of Irish American writing back to the eighteenth century and carries it forward through the traumatic years of the Famine to the present time with an intensely productive period in the twentieth century beginning with James T. Farrell. Later writers treated in depth include Edwin O'Connor, Elizabeth Cullinan, Maureen Howard, and William Kennedy. Along the way he places in the historical record many all but forgotten writers including the prolific Mary Ann Sadlier. The Irish Voice in America is not only a highly readable contribution to American literary history but also a valuable reference to many writers and their works. For this second edition, Fanning has added a chapter that covers the fiction of the past decade. He argues that contemporary writers continue to draw on Ireland as a source and are important chroniclers of the modern American experience.

The Last Hurrah Edwin O'Connor, 1961. The last hurrah describes the life of a typical old style political boss Frank Skeffington who has kept his power as mayor of a large eastern U.S. city for almost 40 years. During the course of his last campaign he is seen not only as the corrupt grafter ruthless with his enemies but also as a man of infinite charm who truly loved his city. The edge of sadness, the second novel of this book, is a perceptive study of the working of God's grace in the lives of a pastor and his charges, second and third generation Irish immigrants in a decaying parish in a thinly disguised Boston.

A Family of His Own Charles F. Duffy, 2003. A family of his own covers Edwin O'Connor's comfortable upbringing in Rhode Island, his formation at Notre Dame, his obscure years in radio and the Coast Guard during World War II, his adoption of Boston, his long association with his publishers at Atlantic Monthly and Little Brown and Company, his toil in journalism and television reviewing, his several sojourns in Ireland, and his extraordinary dedication to his craft while living close to poverty. For the years after The Last Hurrah, Duffy examines O'Connor's handling of newfound wealth and celebrity, his growing loneliness, the surprise and fulfillment of a late marriage, his failure on Broadway, and his return to fiction. Throughout his writing, O'Connor's major subject was the family, especially the gains, losses, and conflicts within assimilated Irish America. Duffy examines the complex ways by which O'Connor's own experience of family and friendship formed essential patterns in his works.

Named one of the Best Books of 2024 by the Chicago Public Library, New York Public Library, and NPR. From the award-winning author of The Troubled Girls of Dragomir Academy comes an unforgettable and deeply personal story of the ghosts that surround us and the ones we carry inside. The house seemed to sit apart from the others on Katydid Street, silent and alone.

like it didn't fit among them. For Violet Hart whose family is about to move into the house on Katydid Street very little felt like it fit anymore. Like their old home suddenly too small since her mother remarried and the new baby arrived. Or Violet's group of friends which since they started middle school isn't enough for Violet's best friend Paige. Everything seemed to be changing at once. But sometimes Violet tells herself change is okay. That is until Violet sees her new room. The attic bedroom in their new house is shadowy creaky and wrapped in old yellow wallpaper covered with a faded tangle of twisting vines and sickly flowers. And then after moving in Violet falls ill and does not get better. As days turn into weeks without any improvement her family growing more confused and her friends wondering if she's really sick at all she finds herself spending more time alone in the room with the yellow wallpaper the shadows moving in the corners wrapping themselves around her at night. And soon Violet starts to suspect that she might not be alone in the room at all.
