What is the vascular system?

The vascular system is a network of blood vessels that transport blood throughout the body. It consists of the heart, arteries, and veins. The system is responsible for delivering oxygen and nutrients to the body's cells and removing waste products.

The heart

The heart is a muscular organ that pumps blood throughout the body. It is divided into four chambers: the right atrium, right ventricle, left atrium, and left ventricle. The right side of the heart pumps deoxygenated blood to the lungs, and the left side pumps oxygenated blood to the rest of the body.

Blood vessels

Blood vessels are the network of tubes that carry blood throughout the body. They are divided into three types: arteries, veins, and capillaries. Arteries carry oxygenated blood away from the heart, veins carry deoxygenated blood back to the heart, and capillaries are the smallest vessels where exchange of oxygen and nutrients occurs.

Importance of pressure

Blood pressure is the force exerted by the blood against the walls of the blood vessels. It is essential for the flow of blood through the vascular system. High blood pressure can damage the blood vessels and lead to heart disease, while low blood pressure can result in inadequate blood flow to the body's tissues.

Arterial valve (aortic)

Arterial valves are located in the arteries to prevent backflow of blood. The aortic valve is the largest of these valves and is located at the base of the aorta. It consists of three leaflets that open to allow blood to flow from the left ventricle into the aorta and close to prevent blood from flowing back into the ventricle.
