Jubilee Jack Dann, 2004-02-21 Jack Dann is the award winning bestselling author of some of the most distinguished work in modern science fiction and fantasy including the classic novels The Man Who Melted and The Memory Cathedral But Dann is also the author of some of the most memorable short fiction of the last twenty five years Here is a generous helping of some of his best work From The Diamond Pit a cautionary tale of the corrupting effects of wealth to the Nebula Award winning Da Vinci Rising to Jubilee the haunting title story of this collection this short collection fiction represents the most brilliant work in the fantastic to be seen in the last three decades There are dark fables such as The Black Horn which introduces a unicorn to modern day Miami and the nightmarish visions of A Quiet Revolution for Death But Jack Dann's visions can be funny too in tales such as Bad Medicine and Fairy Tale though the comedians and ordinary guys caught up in a world beyond their ken may not always think so And in works such as Tattoos and Kaddish Dann even addresses the ultimate human hope of redemption

Concentration Jack Dann, 2016-12 JACK DANN'S groundbreaking anthologies Wandering Stars and More Wandering Stars used the tropes of science fiction fantasy and magical realism to ask and try to answer what it means to be a Jew In his new short story collection Concentration Dann enlists the techniques of fabulation to illuminate one of the defining events in human history the Nazi Holocaust Author and critic Marleen Barr has written that Dann is a Faulkner and a Marquez for Jews and Concentration is a testament to that claim for these confronting and thought provoking stories are written from a perspective rarely seen in literature Concentration is nothing less than an attempt to describe the indescribable to come to terms with the unthinkable The Holocaust was so terrible so far on the edges of comprehension so surreal so psychologically cyclonic and horrific in dimension and effect that perhaps it might best be glimpsed through the reflections of metaphor and fantasy Dann answers the historian Hayden White's call to revise our notion of what constitutes realistic representation in order to take account of experiences that are unique to our century and for which older modes of representation have proven inadequate And given the historical amnesia that seems to characterize our time a work such as this is also necessary
