Working Hours Affecting The Potential For Reduction:

Abnormal Working Hours Can Raise Or Reduce Johnny Ch LOK,2018-12-31 Chapter One Hong Kong laborers abnormal long time working hours reason This research is about Hong Kong employers need laborers to work abnormal long time working hours whether it can assist Hong Kong economic growth and raise productivity both in the long term The outcome is either Hong Kong laborers work long time working hours abnormally who can not rise Hong Kong economic growth or who can rise Hong Kong economic growth in long time Generally Hong Kong employers choose to pay less salary expenditure to need many extra laborers to work abnormal working hours to help them to rise productivity but who don't concern that long time working factor will influence unhealthy to current workers due to who need to work long time working hours abnormally in long time and it seems to cause their workers will reduce productivity and inefficiency in long time Although it is possible that HK laborers can be increased extra abnormal working hours to work to rise Hong Kong employers productivity and assist HK social economy will be grown up in short term but it is also possible that it can't rise Hong Kong economic growth due to their unhealthy or sick increasing to cause productivity declining and inefficiency in long time Thus I shall find evidence to analyze whether Hong Kong laborers need to work abnormal long time working hours Otherwise who will decline Hong Kong economic growth and reduce productivity and inefficiency in long time as well as I shall give suggestion to indicate whether either current workers work abnormal long time working hours or employers ought choose to employ more extra part time workers to assist current laborers to rise their productivity to decide which is the best choice to raise HK economic growth and efficient productivity in long time

1 What is abnormal working hours Economic Problem Effects on Hong Kong employment of working time reduction is found to be difficult to predict The results of Hong Kong macroeconomic simulations of the effects on employments of working time reduction rely heavily on certain basic assumptions such as how many hours people will actually work or how productivity and pay levels will develop Whether HK abnormal working hours will assist HK social economic growth or economic falling down in long term The reasons cause Hong Kong laborers who need to work abnormal long time working hours In fact it isn't the reason that the Hong Kong high skilful laborers market is shortage to supply for the nature of some occupations e.g hospital doctors and nurses university teachers law firm lawyers etc professional occupations

How a Reduction of Standard Working Hours Affects Employment Dynamics Pedro M. Santos Raposo, Jan Cornelis Ours, 2009

How Working Time Reduction Affects Employment and Earnings Pedro S. Raposo, Jan C. van Ours, 2008

Abnormal Working Hours Can Raise Or Reduce Johnny Ch Lok, 2018-12-31 Any countries economic growth are usually calculated in real terms i.e inflation adjusted terms to eliminate the effect of inflation on the price of products produced Economic growth has the indirect potential to reduce poverty as a result of an increase in employment opportunities and increased labor productivity However employment is no guarantee of escaping poverty The international labor organization estimates that is as many as 40% of workers are poor not earning enough to keep families above the 2 a day poverty line For instance in India poor are wage earner in formal employment because jobs are insecure and low paid and offer no chance to accumulate wealth to avoid risk other countries found bigger benefits from focusing more on productivity improvement than low skilled work Thus increase in employment without increase in productivity lead to rise in the number of working poor and these countries don't apply the creation of quality and not quantity in labor market policies In Vietnam for example employment growth has slowed when productivity growth has continued Furthermore productivity increases don't always lead to increase wages e.g. United States the gap between productivity and wages has been rising since the 1980s The Overseas Development Institute study showed that other sectors were just as important in reducing unemployment as manufacturing Nowadays the services sector is most effective at translating productivity growth into employment growth in Hong Kong The HK Government forecast 2012 indicated that HK's economy has slowed growing by 0.9% year on year in the half of 2012 year after expanding by 5% in 2011 year For 2012 year the economy is forecast to grow at 1.2% Consumer prices increased by 5.3% in 2011 year and 4.7% year on year in the first half of 2012 year The unemployment rate was 3.2% for April-June 2012 year compared with 3.4% for 2011 year Although it seemed that unemployment rate decreased 0.2% for April to June 2012 but its unemployment was still existed Moreover HK's economy has slowed to grow by 0.9% only year on year in the first half of 2012 year and HK government forecast to grow at 1.2% for 2012 By United States Government statistic in 2006 year the average man employed full time worked 8.4 hours mandatory minimum amount of paid time off for sickness or holiday However regular full time workers often have the opportunity to take about nine days off for various holiday However regular full time workers of skill leave and two weeks 10 business days of paid holiday time with some workers receiving additional time after several years Because of the pressure of working time with some workers receiving additional time after several years It seems United States developed countries some workers still feel pressure of working shorten working hours can reduce the pressure of working In fact HK many professional workers put in longer hours than the forty hour standard per week A forty hours work week is considered inadequate and may result in job loss or failure to be promoted Although these employers don't spend much salary expenditures to employ extra professional workers to share whose workload and who can perform to serve whose clients efficiently in the short time But in the long time it is possible that who will work pressure possibly due to who need to serve many clients every day and whose working performance will become to be poor to cause inefficiently

The Reduction of Working Hours and Employment Jörg Rosdächer, Hartmut Seifert, 1996 Presents the reduction of working time as an instrument for saving jobs and preventing unemployment Includes a table of worksharing arrangements
