The present report fulfils an undertaking given by the Commission to the European Parliament to develop an information base which can improve understanding both of changes in the Community environment and the effects of Community policies in the environmental field and also in other areas with an impact on the environment. Lead, Mercury, Cadmium and Arsenic in the Environment Thomas C. Hutchinson, K. M. Meema, 1987-05-08. Papers presented by noted researchers consider the occurrence, flux, compartmentalization and residence times of four elements recognized as significant environmental pollutants. Examines data available on these pollutants and pinpoints areas in which further research is needed. The presence of these elements in all ecological environments: oceans, freshwater systems, soils, the atmosphere, etc. and their regional occurrence around the globe are examined in detail, as are their sources and effects on plants, animals and humans. Particular attention is paid to lead, which is the most prevalent pollutant and poses the greatest risk to human health, especially the health of children. Cadmium, Environmental Aspects Stuart Dobson, World Health Organization, 1992.
