

Models of Urban Structure

Concentric zone model

- Central business district
- Factory zone
- Zone of transition
- Zone of working men's homes
- Residential zone
- Commuters' zone

Land use is arranged in a series of concentric rings or zones around the city centre. The idea is that the city has grown outward in all directions from the centre, adding new buildings around the edges. The process is rather like the growth rings of trees. It means that the urban fabric should get older towards the centre. The width of the zones varies according to the density of building.

Sector model

- Central business district
- Wholesale light manufacturing
- Low-class residential
- Medium-class residential
- High-class residential

Land use is arranged in wedges or sectors which radiate from the city centre. Growth follows a linear pattern along major transport routes or physical features such as river valleys. We assume that once a particular type of land use establishes itself in an area, it attracts similar activities (like industry) and repels dissimilar ones (like high-status housing).

Multiple nuclei model

- Central business district
- Wholesale and light manufacturing
- Low-class residential
- Medium-class residential
- High-class residential
- Heavy manufacturing
- Outlying business district
- Industrial suburb

Distinctive land uses form small areas or nuclei such as the central business district, housing estates, industrial estates, and office and retail parks. Often similar activities/types of land use benefit from being clustered together.

Urban Social Structure James M. Beshers, 1981-04-02 Carefully limiting his analysis to the correlation of residential proximity and marriage social class structures and occupational status Dr Beshers clearly demonstrates how census tract data official registrations of residence on marriage licenses and other information can be used to reinforce and corroborate sociological hypotheses Ultimately he develops a theoretical model empirically oriented of the relationship between spatial distribution and social distance in the average American city Social Structure in Urban India P. Nottridge, 2013-06-17 The urban setting in which people live has an important influence upon the organization and planning of their social lives H E Nottridge here presents a valuable introduction to the field of urban sociology showing that it is a theoretical discipline which is worthy of consideration in its own right Throughout his account Mr Nottridge places strong emphasis on the need for comparative perspectives He uses a wide range of source material from urban environments as far apart as shanty towns in developing countries and the great metropolitan complexity of London He covers such topics as scope and methods in urban sociology social differences in towns and in the context of urban social structure the family and network theories He also analyses the work of the Chicago School of Weber Tonnie Park Redfield and Wirth assessing their value for modern urban sociology The author concludes with an examination of housing migration and urban poverty This book was first published in 1972 Social Structure Of Contemporary China Xueyi Lu, 2012-07-24 This book is the third study done by the Research Group on Social Structure Change in Contemporary China a group affiliated with the Institute of Sociology Chinese Academy of Social Sciences The group has focused on the process of development and change in contemporary Chinese social structure and come to the following conclusions Contemporary China is transitioning from a traditional agricultural and rural society to a modern industrialized and urban society from a highly centralized planned economy to a robust socialist market economic system The entire society is undertaking an unprecedented evolution During the three decades of reform and opening up China has made brilliant achievements never seen before in history Now China is in a critical period of reform and opening up with very complex far reaching and closely intertwined social problems which are also unprecedented After deep and detailed analysis the Research Group believes that these problems cannot be resolved only by economic methods In order to get to the roots of these social problems China must develop new social policies strengthen the social structure and carry out social system reform The core purpose of the book is to recommend theories and methods on social structure to society and readers and to investigate the development and change in China s social structure We believe that social structure theory a brand new point of view to analyze the current situation is capable of deciphering the social contradictions in China s development to some extent as opposed to mere economic theory which is inadequate to fully address the structural problems in China

The Community in Urban Society Larry Lyon, Robyn Driskell, 2011-12-16 The community is more than an abstract object of theoretical inquiry It is also a place where people live It is difficult to determine where community research and theory merge because the community is a unique place where theory and the real world come together Local conditions change and new research techniques emerge In the second edition of The Community in Urban Society the authors solve this problem by distilling the historic and foundational theories of community applying traditional approaches typology ecology systems theory and conflict theory to current conditions and exploring new and relevant theories that impact today s communities The latest edition also examines recent and emerging technologies that facilitate examination and evaluation of the modern community condition Updated coverage includes topics such as New Urbanism modern network analysis methods the urban political economy approach to community the growth machine approach GIS mapping recent holistic studies cyberspace communities and up to date discussions of community indicator studies quality of life community power and regime politics restructuring of Chinese urban centres and urban infrastructure migrant workers new housing and new communities and green responses to urban environmental problems The book is particularly valuable in that it includes much new work by scholars based inside China

Dimensions of Urban Social Structure Frank Lancaster Jones, 1969-12-15 The physical segregation of social groups in industrial cities has long attracted the attention of social scientist and casual observer alike In Australia the possibility of mapping the social ecology of large cities has been limited by the absence of sufficiently detailed census of information a gap remedied in 1961 by the provision of a new range of small area data Here the author exploits the existence of the new information to present the first intensive social anatomy of any Australian metropolis Statistics on the residential concentration and segregation of seventy socioeconomic demographic ethnic and religious categories are examined and the vast complexity and range of these data are reduced by sophisticated techniques of statistical analysis to three theoretically meaningful constructs social rank familism and ethnicity These constructs are used to develop a typology of social areas which serves as the basis for developing an understanding of and further hypotheses about urban social structure Not only does this analysis present a self contained study of Australia s second largest metropolis but detailed maps and statistical appendixes provide a benchmark for future social investigations into the urban scene on subjects such as political preference immigrant adjustment poverty crime delinquency and urban planning
