Urbanizing China:

Urbanizing China Gregory Guldin, 1992-04-30 Can China now be considered urbanized Unlike earlier studies that viewed China as a peasant or rural society this book focuses on the question of whether China is already urbanized Each of the contributors considers the degree to which the town country dichotomy has been obliterated in the China of the 1980s and 1990s The focus is unique for previous studies have failed to raise this fundamental question The contributors to the volume who are from China Hong Kong the United States and Canada collectively address China s past and continuing transformation the multiple factors influencing the urbanization of Chinese society and the strengths and weaknesses in China s transformation China s urbanization the authors claim can be traced to two successful development strategies small town development and coastal economic reforms These strategies however raise the question of how China should deal with uneven and inequitable regional growth China s solution Guldin says has been to mix economic liberalization and an emphasis on small town development with a still significant degree of central planning The work is interdisciplinary with contributions from the fields of sociology geography anthropology and urban planning It should be of interest to scholars from all of those disciplines with a special interest in China

The Way of Urbanizing China Shilin Liu, 2023-12-16 The book conducts a comprehensive research study on China s urbanization It puts forward three theoretical development models of urban planning in China i e the politics oriented city the economy oriented city and the human oriented cultural city It makes objective evaluations of the development models of the politics oriented city and the economy oriented city It suggests that relations between the government and the market should be straightened out to solve the hangovers of the development model of the politics oriented city and eco civilization development and cultural development should be put on the top of the government s agenda in order to cope with the recurring problems and complications brought about by the development model of the economy oriented city

Urbanizing China in War and Peace Toby Lincoln, 2015-05-31 Urbanizing China in War and Peace rewrites the history of rural urban relations in the first half of the twentieth century by arguing that urbanization is a total societal transformation and as important a factor as revolution nationalism or modernity in the history of modern China Linking the global and the local in space and time China s urbanization was not only driven by industrial capitalism and the expansion of the state but also shaped how these forces influenced daily life in the city and the countryside Although the conflict that beset China after the Japanese invasion in 1937 affected the development of cities towns and villages it did not derail previous changes To truly understand how China has emerged as the world s largest urban society we must consider such continuities across the first half of the twentieth century during periods of war as well as peace The book focuses on Wuxi a city that lies a hundred miles to the west of Shanghai In the early twentieth century local industrialists were responsible for it quickly becoming the largest industrial city in China outside treaty ports They built factories roads and other infrastructure outside the old city walls and in surrounding towns and villages Chapters examine the county's transformation as recorded in guidebooks and travel magazines of the time and the role of the state in the early 1920s and into the Nanjing Decade when new administrative laws led to the continued expansion of the city under both municipal and county officials. They explore the revival of the silk industry during the Japanese occupation and the industry's role in driving urbanization as well as efforts by Chinese leaders to carry out prewar development plans despite lockdowns and qingxiang clean the countryside campaigns. In the midst of the barbed wire and watch towers plans to shape the built environment in Wuxi County and the region as a whole persisted and were carried out. Ambitious and well researched Urbanizing China in War and Peace will appeal to scholars and students of Chinese urban history the Anti Japanese War of Resistance and the Republican period. Its engagement with issues of urbanization in general will interest urban historians of other times and places.

China Urbanizing Weiping Wu, Qin Gao, 2022-09-20. China turned majority urban only in the recent decade a dramatic leap given that less than 20 percent of its population lived in cities before 1980. This book situates China's urbanization in the interconnected forces of historical legacies contemporary state interventions and human and ecological conditions. It captures the complexity of the phenomenon of urbanization in its historical and regional variations and explores its impact on the country's socioeconomic welfare environment and resources urban form and lifestyle and population and health. It is also a book about China in which the contributors provide new perspectives to understand the transitions underway and the gravity of the progress particularly in the context of demographic shifts and climate change. The chapters in China Urbanizing written by American and Chinese scholars achieve three interconnected aims. The first is to explore how the process of urbanization has shaped and been influenced by the social economic and physical interactions that take place in and beyond cities and the state interventions intended to regulate such interactions. The second is to examine the shifts and evolutions emerging in urban China such as the economic slowdown population aging and low fertility rates and how cities interact with the environment and planet given China's rising role in the global discourse on climate change. The third is to explore new sources of information for conducting research on urban China such as satellite and street level imagery data and online listings to account for the complexity and heterogeneity that characterize contemporary Chinese urbanization.
