

SUPERNATURAL ENGLAND

Very few can say with true conviction that there are no such things as ghosts. A glance at this book must give even the hardened sceptic pause for thought.

Taking the English counties alphabetically, Betty Puttick and her team of co-authors have produced a wealth of supernatural events. Many of the stories are written from recent first-hand accounts; others are tales so strange or terrifying that they have remained unforgettable over time.

Who could guess, for instance, that Brockley Combe near Bristol, a favourite beauty spot by day, could harbour the phantom of a black bearse drawn by four snorting horses by night! Why does the owner of Raby Castle in County Durham, who was tragically forced to surrender it to Henry VIII in 1569, still haunt his former home today? How did Country Life photographers capture the famous Brown Lady of Raynham Hall on camera? Why is the unmistakable sound of a crash still heard at the spot on Brooklands Motor Circuit where record-breaking Percy Lambert met his death? And are those terrifying hairy hands still waiting for another victim on Dartmoor's haunted highway?

These stories and many more make chilling reading and perhaps give credence to the claim that England is the most haunted place on earth.
