Trb Culture:

TRB Culture Magdalena S. Midgley, 1992 This is the first major synthesis of the TRB Trichterrandbecher funnel necked beaker culture one of the most extensive cultural patterns in the European prehistory of the 4th and 3rd millennia BC The TRB culture covers a vast geographical area stretching from South East Poland to the Netherlands and from Southern Scandinavia to Bohemia and Moravia Consequently it presents enormous difficulties to scholars trying to build an overall picture of the culture and its significance difficulties of language of the scale of the subject and of the amount of material to be assimilated and assessed In this book Magdalena Midgley manages the impressive task of bringing together evidence from the whole North European Plain including new material published in German Danish Dutch Polish and Russian It gives the student and the professional archaeologist an up to date guide to the basic subject matter from an international perspective as well as offering an evaluation of the views of other scholars whose findings are not available in English of groups of large axes puzzled those confronted with them The fact that most were found in waterlogged places increased the speculation as to the nature of the deposits This thesis is concerned with the character and significance of TRB flint axe depositions The first part is mainly concerned with the question of selective deposition and how it was structured By means of metrical spatial and functional analysis patterns are explored that can shed light on the actions performed by people in the past The second part deals with the meaning and significance of TRB flint axe depositions Why did people in the past do the things they did how were these actions meaningful and important Using sociological theory and ethnographic evidence an interpretation is presented based on the empirically observed patterns
