Treadmill To Oblivion:

Treadmill to Oblivion Fred Allen,1954 Treadmill to Oblivion Fred Allen,2016-10-21 In the spring of 1932 I had finished a two year run in Threes A Crowd a musical revue in which I appeared with Clifton Webb and Libby Holman The following September I was to go into a new show I had no contract merely the producers promise When I returned to New York to start rehearsals I discovered that there was to be no show It had been a hot summer Many people hadn t been able to keep things One of the things the producer hadn t been able to keep was his promise With the advance of refrigeration I hope that along with the frozen foods someday we will have frozen conversation A person will be able to keep a frozen promise indefinitely This will be a boon to show business where more chorus girls are kept than promises With no immediate plans for the theater I began to wonder about radio Many of the big name comedians were appearing on regular programs In the theater the actor had uncertainty broken promises constant travel and a gypsy existence In radio if you were successful there was an assured season of work The show could not close if there was nobody in the balcony There was no travel and the actor could enjoy a permanent home There may have been other advantages but I didn t need to know them The pioneer comedians on radio were Amos and Andy Ray Knight and his Cuckoo Hour the Gold Dust Twins Stoopnagle and Budd and the Tasty Yeast Jesters With the exception of Amos and Andy who had been playing smalltime vaudeville theaters under the name of Sam and Henry the others were trained and developed in radio All of these artists performed their comedy routines in studios without audiences Their entertainment was planned for the listener at home In the early 1930 s when the Broadway comedians descended on radio things went from hush to raucous The theater buffoon had no conception of the medium and no time to study its requirements The Broadway slogan was Its dough lets go Eddie Cantor Jack Pearl Ed Wynn Joe Penner and others were radio sensations They brought their audiences into the studios used their theater techniques and their old vaudeville jokes and laughter rehearsed or spontaneous started exploding between the commercials The cause of this merriment was not always clear The bewildered set owner in Galesburg Illinois suddenly realized that he no longer had to be able to understand radio comedy As he sat in his Galesburg living room he knew that he had proxy audiences sitting in radio studios in New York Chicago and Hollywood watching the comedians laughing and shrieking Vass you dere Charlie and Wanna buy a duck for him
