the construction of the never married mother from victim in the 1950s to parasite in the late 1980s Finally it examines the way in which policies have defined the problem of lone motherhood over time and the way in which lone mothers have been treated with regard to housing social security and employment The study concludes that there is little possibility of putting the genie back in the bottle in terms of reducing the number of lone mothers efforts to do so by reducing public expenditure on them may be effective but at the expense of the children involved Instead the authors urge policy makers to change focus again and pay more attention to investing in children
