

CORONA

The outermost layer of the solar atmosphere. The corona is made of a tenuous ionized gas called plasma, with temperatures up to a million degrees Fahrenheit. The corona is visible to the naked eye only during a total solar eclipse.

PROMINENCES

Structures in the corona made of relatively cool plasma supported by magnetic fields. Prominences are bright structures when seen over the solar limb, but appear dark when seen against the bright solar disk (where they're called filaments).

HELMET STREAMERS

Large, caplike coronal structures with long pointed peaks that usually lie over sunspots and active regions. These often have a prominence or filament at their base.

POLAR PLUMES

Bright structures of fast-flowing solar material coming from coronal holes, areas with magnetic field lines open to interplanetary space. Coronal holes are more common near, but not exclusive to, the poles.

CORONAL LOOPS

Found around sunspots and in active regions. These structures are associated with the closed magnetic field lines that connect magnetic regions on the solar surface.
