Ethiopia's 'Developmental State' Tom Lavers,2023-10-05 Ethiopia stands out as a leading example of state led development in Africa Tom Lavers offers in this book a comprehensive multi sector analysis of Ethiopia s development project examining how regimes maintain power during the extended periods required to bring about economic transformation Specifically Lavers explores how the Ethiopian Peoples Revolutionary Democratic Front EPRDF 1991 2019 sought to maintain political order through economic transformation and why the party collapsed leading to the outbreak of civil war in 2020 The book argues that the EPRDF sought to secure mass acquiescence through distribution of land and employment However rapid population growth and the limits of industrial policy in the contemporary global economy led to a distributive crisis that was a central factor in the regime s collapse This Ethiopian experience raises important questions about the prospects for economic transformation elsewhere on the continent This title is also available as Open Access on Cambridge Core at doi.org/10.1017/9781009428316

Global Land Grabbing and Political Reactions 'from Below' Marc Edelman, Ruth Hall, Saturnino M. Borrás Jr., Ian Scoones, Ben White, Wendy Wolford, 2017-08-15

When the 2007-2008 food and financial crises triggered a global wave of land grabbing scholars, activists and policy practitioners assumed that this would be met with massive peasant resistance. As empirical evidence accumulated however it became clear that political reactions from below to land grabbing were quite varied and complex. Violent resistance, outright expulsions, everyday weapons of the weak and demands for better terms of incorporation into land deals were among the outcomes that emerged. Readers of this collection will encounter a multinational group of scholars who use the tools of social movements theory and critical agrarian studies to examine cases from Argentina, Mexico, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Colombia, Ethiopia, Madagascar, Mozambique, Uganda, Mali, Ukraine, India and Laos as well as the Rio 20 Sustainable Development Conference. Initiatives from below in response to land deals have involved local and transnational alliances and the use of legal and extra-legal methods and have brought victories and defeats. This book was first published as a special issue of The Journal of Peasant Studies.

The Oxford Handbook of the Ethiopian Economy Fantu Cheru, Christopher Cramer, Arkebe Oqubay, 2019-01-10

From a war-torn and famine-plagued country at the beginning of the 1990s, Ethiopia is today emerging as one of the fastest growing economies in Africa. Growth in Ethiopia has surpassed that of every other sub-Saharan country over the past decade and is forecast by the International Monetary Fund to exceed 8 percent over the next two years. The government has set its eyes on transforming the country into a middle income country by 2025 and into a leading manufacturing hub in Africa. The Oxford Handbook of the Ethiopian Economy studies this country's unique model of development where the state plays a central role and where a successful industrialization drive has challenged the long-held erroneous assumption that industrial policy will never work in poor African countries. While much of the volume is focused on post-1991 economic development policy and strategy, the analysis is set against the background of the long history of Ethiopia and more specifically on the Imperial period that ended in 1974, the socialist development experiment of the Derg regime between 1974 and 1991, and the policies and strategies of the current EPRDF government that assumed power in 1991. Including a range of contributions from both academic and professional standpoints, this volume is a key reference work on the economy of Ethiopia.

Regional State, 2011      Compatibility between Democratic Developmental State and Federal System in Ethiopia Yemane Gebreselasse, 2025-02-13 The Democratic Developmental State model intends to promote economic growth and democracy at the same time Since 2000 s the ruling party EPRDF declared that the Democratic Developmental State is the only model which can lift Ethiopia out of poverty by building up an authentic democratic system The party states that this due to the fact that the democratic developmental state is the best alternative to be implemented in developing countries Both the party and the government of Ethiopia explained that a system which is not democratic can t be applied in Ethiopia because Ethiopia is a country based on diversity So any kind of political model to be implemented in Ethiopia should include democracy as its basis From the point of view of its administrative structure Ethiopia is a federal state The compatibility of the Democratic Developmental State and the Federal Democratic State is addressed by many authors However the issue of Democratic Developmental State and the federalist model to be applied in the administration of the state is not discussed in an adequate manner In this essay the author Yemane Gebreselasse analyses the compatibility between the Democratic Developmental State and the Federal System in Ethiopia The development of Ethiopia shows some very impressive achievements but also some drawbacks The country has registered a rapid economic growth after it has adopted the new model However there are some critical points one is the lack of the elite commitment the other the lack of an effective bureaucracy Furthermore strong institutions are missing This results in a weak democratization process Some argue that Federalism is a decentralised system of government while DDS needs centralised planning But in the case of Ethiopia there are two layers of administration and these are the federal and regional government which means that there is a power distribution between them      Fragile States and Development in West Africa Oliver Maponga, 2012

Hammarskjöld Library, 1992      Developmental State and Economic Transformation Gebre Abiyot Geneme, 2015-01-29 The question of whether state intervention in the process of growth and development helps poor countries grow in a sustained way is still mired by controversy According to some scholars view a state economic intervention often appears to have been more a hindrance than help stifling the market rather than facilitating the process of economic growth and transformation One of the prominent views now especially by neo liberals is that the state in Africa and other developing countries should reduce its role in the process of economic transformation In contrast to the neo liberals others take an opposite view and argue that state intervention is necessary for development to take place because development requires not less state but better state action and this is likely from a developmental state model These views indicate that scholars are under debate whether state led development strategies could promotes or create additional hurdles for economic growth and transformation The author therefore provides an analysis of the effects of developmental state strategies on economic transformation in Ethiopia
