Urban Informality Ananya Roy, Nezar AlSayyad, 2003-11-22 The turn of the century has been a moment of rapid urbanization Much of this urban growth is taking place in the cities of the developing world and much of it in informal settlements This book presents cutting edge research from various world regions to demonstrate these trends The contributions reveal that informal housing is no longer the domain of the urban poor rather it is a significant zone of transactions for the middle class and even transnational elites Indeed the book presents a rich view of urban informality as a system of regulations and norms that governs the use of space and makes possible new forms of social and political power The book is organized as a transnational endeavor It brings together three regional domains of research the Middle East Latin America and South Asia that are rarely in conversation with one another It also unsettles the hierarchy of development and underdevelopment by looking at some First World processes of informality through a Third World research lens The Global Challenge and Marginalization Márcio Moraes Valença,2008 Marginality is often seen as a reflection of division in which there is an unequal relationship of economic and political power between two extremes In this way it is a common thing to find oppositional couples like North South Rich Poor Homogenous Heterogenous Centre Periphery Inclusion Exclusion Developed Underdeveloped and New Old in much of the literature dealing with marginality These oppositions come about out of a socially and politically unbalanced society which is organised according to the differentiation of individuals in a hierarchical exclusionary fashion In this book there are 25 chapters written by 36 academics from 27 universities located in 14 countries and in 4 continents on this fascinating subject matter UNRISD News ,1999 Globalization Dr. S. M. Rahman,2000 Papers read at a seminar organized by the Foundation for Research on International Environment National Development and Security FRIENDS held on 14 16 September 1999 at Islamabad The State of the World's Children 1996 Carol Bellamy,UNICEF.,1996 UNICEF s 1996 State of the World s Children report marking the organization s 50th anniversary examines the plight of children caught in the crossfire of armed conflicts or propelled into the savagery as combatants It also reflects on the long term toll taken on the young by wars fought most frequently in impoverished societies least able to rebuild shattered economies and lives This report a celebrated voice which highlights the pressing problems of children and offers solutions to them is one of the best known and most widely read of all United Nations publications It is published annually in some 40 languages and distributed to readers and the media in over 150 countries at the end of December each year The Politics of Human Rights Tony Evans,2001 Reveals the role played by identity documents in Israel's apartheid policies towards the Palestinians from the 1940s to today Human Rights Obligations in Education Katarina Tomaševski,2006 This book describes how human rights safeguards should be applied in education Its point of departure is the fact that education can and does violate human rights notably when it is imposed upon the indigenous or minorities so as to obliterate their identity Human rights are defined as safeguards against abuse of power whose counterpart are governmental human rights obligations These are to make education available accessible acceptable and adaptable hence the 4 A scheme The purpose of human rights work is to expose and oppose abuses of power They can be detected in the very design of education strategies Defining availability of primary education as a development target removed into distant future negates the right to education and the corresponding governmental obligations individual and collective The book uses examples from different regions to describe safeguards that are necessary to transform political promises into legal obligations Where education is available access may be conditioned by purchasing power rather than defined as a human right Denials of the right to education include discrimination against non citizens or girls They demonstrate the crucial import of human rights the need to differentiate between poverty and policy based exclusion from education Acceptability of education entails ensuring that education does not violate human rights and is worthy of its name Typical human rights cases have challenged in all corners of the world the language of instruction censorship of textbooks or harassment of teachers for introducing human rights education Also human rights challenges are epitomized in the requirement to adapt education to the learners to recognize them as subjects of rights On the micro level adapting education to children with disabilities has triggered human rights challenges world wide On the macro level adaptability tackles the very design of education Graduate unemployment illustrates shortcomings of treating education as a self contained sector as do choices between public and private secular and religious segregated and all inclusive education The book is published by Wolf Legal Publishers jointly with the European Association for Education Law and Policy Katarina Tomasevski was Professor of International Law and International Relations at Lund University Sweden and from 1998 2004 she was Special Rapporteur on the right to education of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights The book draws on her experience in carrying out country missions in countries as different as the People s Republic of China and United States of America and facilitating redress for human rights violations in education world wide <http://www.tomasevski.net>
