The Routledge History Handbook of Central and Eastern Europe in the Twentieth Century Włodzimierz

Borodziej, Ferenc Laczó, Joachim von Puttkamer, 2020-08-02 Intellectual Horizons offers a pioneering transnational and comparative treatment of key thematic areas in the intellectual and cultural history of Central and Eastern Europe in the twentieth century. For most of the twentieth century Central and Eastern European ideas and cultures constituted an integral part of wider European trends. However, the intellectual and cultural history of this diverse region has rarely been incorporated sufficiently into nominally comprehensive histories of Europe. This volume redresses this underrepresentation and provides a more balanced perspective on the recent past of the continent through original critical overviews of themes ranging from the social and conceptual history of intellectuals and histories of political thought and historiography to literary, visual, and religious cultures to perceptions and representations of the region in the twentieth century. While structured thematically, individual contributions are organized chronologically. They emphasize where relevant generational experiences, agendas, and accomplishments while taking into account the sharp ruptures that characterize the period. The third in a four-volume set on Central and Eastern Europe in the twentieth century, it is the go-to resource for understanding the intellectual and cultural history of this dynamic region.

Beyond 3D TV Tony Sperry, Re-viewing Television History Helen Wheatley, 2007-10-24. Written by leading scholars in the field, this book is an internationally relevant cutting-edge reassessment of both current methods and practices in television historiography and of assumptions about television history itself. The book focuses on debates about the canon, on institutions, texts, and audiences, and the interconnections between these distinct areas. Through discussions and case studies, it covers a wide selection of television's approaches to immigration and natural history, to economic histories of television, the framing of television aesthetics, and problems in constructing a television canon. Each section opens with the editor's overview of the historical research, and an appendix details the main research resources for television historians in the UK.

Television Anthony Smith, Richard Paterson, 1998. From its earliest beginnings, television was destined to become one of the great new forces at work in the twentieth century. This new edition, which includes six completely new chapters, greatly expands the original and unique historical coverage of this most influential cultural phenomenon. Written by a distinguished international team of specialists, the book describes the history of television from its technical conception in the nineteenth century right through to the bewildering multi-media developments of the present. Alongside this historical account, chapters provide important discussion of the central debates affecting television world-wide, from America, Canada, and Britain to Europe, Scandinavia, Japan, China, South Asia, the Arab world, Australia, Africa, and the Third World. All genres of programme-making—news, sport, drama, comedy—are examined in the light of key questions: how viewing practices affect particular societies; how standards of taste and decency are arrived at; the influence of television on government power; the role of public service broadcasting; and the relationship of television to terrorism and violence. A thought-provoking Epilogue ponders the likely impact and influence of television in the coming years. This book is accessibly written and is a major exploration of the world's most dominant medium.
