The International Development of China Sun Yat-sen, 1956-01-01 As soon as Armistice was declared in the recent World War I began to take up the study of the International Development of China and to form programs accordingly I was prompted to do so by the desire to contribute my humble part in the realization of world peace China a country possessing a territory of 4 289 000 square miles a population of 400 000 000 people and the richest mineral and agricultural resources in the world is now a prey of militaristic and capitalistic powers a greater bone of contention than the Balkan Peninsula Unless the Chinese question can be settled peacefully another world war greater and more terrible than the one just past will be inevitable In order to solve the Chinese question I suggest that the vast resources of China be developed internationally under a socialistic scheme for the good of the world in general and the Chinese people in particular It is my hope that as a result of this the present spheres of influence can be abolished the international commercial war can be done away with the internecine capitalistic competition can be got rid of and last but not least the class struggle between capital and labor can be avoided Thus the root of war will be forever exterminated so far as China is concerned Each part of the different programs in this International Scheme is but a rough sketch or a general policy produced from a layman's thought with very limited materials at his disposal So alterations and changes will have to be made after scientific investigation and detailed survey For instance in regard to the projected Great Northern Port which is to be situated between the mouths of the Tsingho and the Lwanho the writer thought that the entrance of the harbor should be at the eastern side of the port but from actual survey by technical engineers it is found that the entrance of the harbor should be at the western side of the port instead So I crave great indulgence on the part of experts and specialists

The International Development of China Yat-sen Sun,1953

The International Development of China (Classic Reprint) Yat-Sen Sun,2017-11-19 Excerpt from The International Development of China It is estimated that during the last year of the World War the daily expenses of the various fighting nations amounted to two hundred and forty millions of dollars gold Take it for granted in a most conservative way that only one half of this sum was spent on munitions and other direct war supplies that is one hundred and twenty millions of dollars gold Let us consider these war supplies from a commercial point of view The battle field is the market for these new industries the consumers of which are the soldiers Various industries had to be enlisted and many new ones created for the supplies In order to increase the production of these war commodities day by day people of the warring countries and even those of the neutral states had to be content with the barest necessities of life and had to give Up all former comforts and luxuries Now the war is ended and the sole market of these war supplies has closed let us hope forever for the good of Humanity So henceforth we are concerned with the problem as to how a readjustment might be brought about What is to be considered first is the reconstruction of the various countries and next the supply of comforts and luxuries that will have to be resumed We remember that one hundred and twenty million dollars were spent every day on direct war supplies Let us then suppose that the two items mentioned will take up one half of this sum that is sixty millions of dollars a day which will still leave us a balance of sixty million dollars a day to be utilized Besides the many millions of soldiers who were once consumers will from now on become producers again Further more the unification and nationalization of all the industries About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work
