

A historical painting depicting Christopher Columbus and his crew on a beach. Columbus, in the center, is dressed in a red and white striped tunic and a dark cape, holding a sword aloft. He is surrounded by his men, some in armor and some in simpler clothing, all holding spears and flags. To the right, a Native American man in a feathered headdress stands prominently. In the background, a large yellow flag with a red cross and a blue circle is visible. The scene is set on a sandy beach with a forest in the background and a ship on the water to the left.

The New Nation:

The New Nation Edward Bellamy, 1892 The First New Nation Seymour Martin Lipset, The United States was the first major colony to revolt successfully against colonial rule In this sense it was the first new nation To see how in the course of American history its values took shape in institutions may help us to understand some of the problems faced by the new nations emerging today on the world scene In The First New Nation two broad themes occupy Seymour Martin Lipset's attention the social conditions that make a stable democracy possible and the extent to which the American experience was representative or exceptional The volume is divided into three parts each of which deals with the role of values in a nation's evolution but each approaches this role from a different perspective Part 1 America as a New Nation compares early America with today's emerging nations to discover problems common to them as new nations and analyzes some of the consequences of a revolutionary birth for the creation of a national character and style Part 2 Stability in the Midst of Change traces how values derived from America's revolutionary origins have continued to influence the form and substance of American institutions Lipset concentrates on American history in later periods selecting for discussion as critical cases religious institutions and trade unions Part 3 Democracy in Comparative Perspective attempts to show by comparative analysis some ways through which a nation's values determine its political evolution It compares political development in several modern industrialized democracies including the United States touching upon value patterns value differences party systems and the bases of social cleavage The New Nation Joy Hakim, 1999 Each book in this award winning series is accurate and reliable history written in the tradition of great storytelling The narrative and informal text includes off beat little known events and singular personalities that make the traditional meat and potatoes of American history anything but boring

The New Nation Merrill Jensen, 1958 Nations, Markets, and War Nicholas Greenwood Onuf, Peter S. Onuf, 2006 The limits of history Liberal society Civilized nations Moral persons Nation making Adam Smith moral historian National destinies War and peace in the New World The North and the nation The South and the nation The Bank of the United States and the American Economy Edward Kaplan, 1999-09-30 An account of the history structure and operation of the First and Second Banks of the United States this study examines how the banks performed as national and central institutions and what happened to the economy when the charter of the Second Bank was allowed to expire in 1836 Historians have paid little recent attention to the early history of central banking in the United States and many Americans believe that the Federal Reserve created in 1913 was our first central bank The economic crisis during the American Revolution actually led to the founding of a national bank called the Bank of North America during the period of Confederation Although it became a private bank before the Constitution was ratified in 1788 it proved to be such a success that in 1791 Alexander Hamilton the first Secretary of the Treasury was able to convince President Washington that a similar bank should be established While the First Bank of the United States performed well during its tenure its charter was allowed to lapse in 1811 A Second Bank of the United States was created five years later in 1816 and it prospered under the leadership of its third president Nicholas Biddle from 1823 to 1830 when central banking was practiced This success ended with the 1828 election of Andrew Jackson who refused to recharter the bank and withdrew the government s funds in 1833 Severely weakened the Bank continued but its charter finally expired in 1836 much to Biddle s dismay Palestine, Taiwan, and Western Sahara Sabella Ogbobode Abidde,2023-07-24 To have a State four distinct conditions must be met First there must be a community of people and it matters not whether they belong to the same color faith or ethnicity Second there must be a geographical space a settlement that this community of people calls a home Third there must be governing authority And finally the government must be sovereign sovereign in the sense that it is self governing and independent of any domestic or international body Palestine Taiwan and Western Sahara have met all the forestated conditions except for broad international support and recognition and membership of the United Nations However this has not been the case with Palestine Taiwan and Western Sahara This edited volume examines some of the endogenous and exogenous factors that have contributed to the ambiguous and contested nature of these political entities and argued that the undermined nature of these entities contributes to regional instability and global insecurity And finally the continued denial of statehood is a violation of their collective human rights
