The Untempered Wind Joanna E. Wood, 1998 The Untempered Wind (Classic Reprint) Joanna E. Wood, 2018-01-20 Excerpt from The Untempered Wind IT was early spring the maples were but budding the birds newly come and restless the sky more gray than blue and the air still sharp with a tang of frost James town s streets however looked both bright and busy About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works The Untempered Wind Joanna E. Wood, 1994 This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text Purchasers can download a free scanned copy of the original book without typos from the publisher Not indexed Not illustrated 1894 Excerpt But Homer Wilson was not thinking of any generalizations he was simply concerned with the debt he owed Myron Holder and how to pay it for and be it told with no thought of disparaging Homer Wilson he felt he would bestow an inestimable benefit upon Myron Holder by making her his wife He believed he would at one blow free her from the shackles of shame He never thought of the woman soul that strove to justify itself by rigid adherence to those vows that had seemed so sacred uttered as they were by lips that were almost divine to the listening heart they had betrayed It must be remembered that Homer was nothing but a plain countryman It was therefore natural that he should look upon himself somewhat in the light of a deliverer when he considered himself in relation to Myron and yet inarticulate but existent there was a hesitancy in his heart not born of self conceit or paltry self seeking but rooted in the knowledge of his own weakness in time of trial But he put aside all this and as he pushed on towards Jamestown mused happily upon the happiness that was his for he loved Myron Holder Poor Homer Whoso encamps To take a fancied city of delight Oh what a wretch is he CHAPTER XIV For thy life shall fall as a leaf and be shed as the rain And the veil of thine head shall be grief and the crown shall be pain It was late autumn The grapes were all cut although their aroma still filled the air for stray bunches superripened by the frost hung visible now upon the leafless stems where they had been concealed by the foliage from the cutters The late apples were all picked and in the orchards were great piles of new barrels ready to be filled Bright green fields checkered the face of the sombre countryside with vivid squares The Untempered Wind B.
