M. Jacob,2007-09-06 W M Jacob examines the concept of profession during the later Stuart and Georgian period with special reference to the clergy of the Church of England He describes their social backgrounds how they were recruited selected and educated and obtained jobs how they were paid and their lifestyles and family life as well as examining the evidence for what they did as leaders of worship pastors and teachers how their parishioners responded to them and how they were supervised Jacob concludes that contrary to popular views the clerical profession was much better organized educated and supervised than the medical and legal professions during this period During the age of reform from the 1780s to the 1830s all the professions were criticized Jacob suggests that the modest regulation and professional training introduced in the other learned professions in the 1830s only slowly brought them to the standard already achieved by the clerical profession      An Address on the Influence of the Clerical Profession Robert Dale Owen,183?      An Address on the Influence of the Clerical Profession Robert Dale Owen,1842      The clerical profession Robert Lee,1866      The Clerical Profession, Some of Its Difficulties and Hindrances: an Address, Etc Robert Lee,1866      The Duties of the Clerical Profession ,1810      An Address on the Influence of the Clerical Profession Robert Dale Owen,1833      The Clerical Profession Robert Dale Owen,1833*      The Professions in Early Modern England Wilfrid Prest,2023-08-18 First published in 1987 The Professions in Early Modern England highlights the significant role of professional and quasi professional occupations in English society before the industrial revolution contrary to what was once historiographical and sociological orthodoxy The editorial introduction provides an overview of the history of the professions as a distinct field of scholarly investigation suggesting that neither historians nor social theorists have adequately mapped or explained the rise of the professions to their present place in modern societies The following chapters bring together original contributions by researchers who have made a close study of various occupational groups over the period c 1500 1750 Besides the traditional learned professions and their practitioners in the church medicine and the law they survey occupations generally lacking institutional coherence school teachers estate stewards and those following the profession of arms This book remains of interest to students of
