A. Karasev and V. Valov

UDC 515.12

ABSTRACT. This paper is a survey of some recent results in dimension theory. The main topics under consideration are: dimension of maps in the classical and extension dimension theories, universal spaces (in particular, universal compacta) in extension dimension theory, and  $[L]$ -homotopy. A number of theorems included in the survey are accompanied by proofs.

1. Preliminaries

1.1. Introduction. The study of universal spaces and dimensional properties of maps is a classical direction in dimension theory. The goal of this paper is to provide an overview of some recent related results. We did not aim at full coverage of all achievements in this very broad field. Instead, we included proofs of some theorems, thus hoping to convey the key ideas to the reader.

The paper is organized as follows. We begin by introducing our notation and some preliminary facts in Sec. 1.2. In Sec. 1.3, we recall the definition of extension dimension and related concepts. Further, we state Dranishnikov's theorem, which describes extension dimension in terms of cohomological dimension, and discuss some related questions. Section 2, which opens the main part of this paper, is devoted to dimension of maps whose ranges are metrizable  $C$ -spaces. In particular, we present generalized versions of the parametric decomposition theorem and of the parametric Hurewicz theorem on regularly branched maps. A number of results on embeddings in  $\mathbb{R}^n$  avoiding given collections of planes or having "small" intersections with them constitute Sec. 3. Various generalizations of theorems on dimension-lowering and dimension-raising maps to extension dimension are discussed in Sec. 4. Section 5 is devoted to universal spaces in extension theory. We are mainly interested in the existence of universal compacta of given extension dimension. In relation to this problem, we introduce a special class of CW-complexes, called quasi-finite complexes, and study their properties. "Classical" universal spaces have many useful properties (in addition to universality). In particular, they are absolute extensors in the corresponding dimension. We analyze the possibility of obtaining extension-dimension analogs of universal spaces with a similar property in Sec. 6. In Sec. 7, we describe a general approach to quasi-finite complexes and show that these complexes behave well in many respects, thus
