SYSTAT Advanced Applications, 1994 Continuous Hydrologic Simulation of Runoff for the Middle Fork and South Fork of the Beargrass Creek Basin in Jefferson County, Kentucky G. Lynn Jarrett, Aimee C. Downs, Patricia A. Grace-Jarrett, 1998 Classification and Information Processing at the Turn of the Millennium Reinhold Decker, Wolfgang A. Gaul, 2012-12-06 This volume contains revised versions of selected papers presented during the 23rd Annual Conference of the German Classification Society GfKl Gesellschaft für Klassifikation. The conference took place at the University of Bielefeld, Germany, in March 1999 under the title Classification and Information Processing at the Turn of the Millennium. Researchers and practitioners interested in data analysis, classification, and information processing in the broad sense, including computer science, multimedia, WWW, knowledge discovery, and data mining, as well as special application areas such as, in alphabetical order, biology, finance, genome analysis, marketing, medicine, public health, and text analysis, had the opportunity to discuss recent developments and to establish cross-disciplinary cooperation in their fields of interest. Additionally, software and book presentations, as well as several tutorial courses, were organized. The scientific program of the conference included 18 plenary or semi-plenary lectures and more than 100 presentations in special sections. The peer-reviewed papers are presented in 5 chapters as follows: Data Analysis and Classification; Computer Science; Computational Statistics and Data Mining; Management Science; Marketing and Finance; Biology; Genome Analysis; and Medicine; Text Analysis; and Information Retrieval. As an unambiguous assignment of results to single chapters is sometimes difficult, papers are grouped in a way that the editors found appropriate.

National Remuneration (Pay) Preferences Linda M. Herkenhoff, 2002. Remuneration may be viewed as more than merely a cost in doing business. It may be used as a motivational tool to help achieve a multitude of strategic goals. Within the global context, effective use of this tool requires addressing not only motivational factors but also cultural factors. In this thesis, factors are considered within a multinational corporate framework and within a Cultural Remuneration Model. The model defines corporate culture, professional culture, national culture, and individual characteristics as factors influencing employee values associated with remuneration preferences. The theoretical development of the model required a statistically significant multinational sample. To achieve this, data was collected in 17 countries from one multinational corporation within the chemical oil industry. All 861 respondents were non-management and performed technical functions. This sample selection reduced any variance associated with corporate or professional cultures. Empirical results were determined from the respondents through use of surveys. Two surveys were conducted three months apart. National culture was operationalised within the framework of the five Hofstede cultural indices: power distance, long term orientation, uncertainty avoidance, individualism, and masculinity. Remuneration was operationalised using several theoretically substantiated constructs developed for this study. The survey results were analysed at both the country, ecological, and the individual employee levels. Analysis was completed using multilevel modeling of both country and employee level effects At the ecological level data means were calculated to establish a relationship between the national culture mean and remuneration preference mean on a country by country basis These results were analysed using Spearman Rank Order Correlation statistics At the individual level analysis was completed using structural equation modeling Random coefficient multilevel modeling techniques were used to complete the analysis The ecological analyses on both surveys produced statistically significant correlations with the Hofstede results The ecological level review of the relationship between national culture values and remuneration values indicated several direct relationships between the five cultural indices and their associated remuneration elements The individual level analyses produced similar results indicative of the direct relationships between remuneration preferences and cultural values Although several individual characteristics achieved significance in the structural equation models their influence is only weak to moderate The multilevel results indicated that more than 70% of the variance can be attributed to country level effects rather than to individual level effects Ecological level individual level and multilevel models all identified a significant influence of national culture on employees preference of remuneration elements within the oil chemical multinational corporation environment A strategically aligned motivated workforce may result when this type of remuneration analysis leads to the design of remuneration programs that take into account national culture influence

Measurement Error and Latent Variables in Econometrics T. Wansbeek,E. Meijer,2000-12-08 The book first discusses in depth various aspects of the well known inconsistency that arises when explanatory variables in a linear regression model are measured with error Despite this inconsistency the region where the true regression coefficients lies can sometimes be characterized in a useful way especially when bounds are known on the measurement error variance but also when such information is absent Wage discrimination with imperfect productivity measurement is discussed as an important special case Next it is shown that the inconsistency is not accidental but fundamental Due to an identification problem no consistent estimators may exist at all Additional information is desirable This information can be of various types One type is exact prior knowledge about functions of the parameters This leads to the CALS estimator Another major type is in the form of instrumental variables Many aspects of this are discussed including heteroskedasticity combination of data from different sources construction of instruments from the available data and the LIML estimator which is especially relevant when the instruments are weak The scope is then widened to an embedding of the regression equation with measurement error in a multiple equations setting leading to the exploratory factor analysis EFA model This marks the step from measurement error to latent variables Estimation of the EFA model leads to an eigenvalue problem A variety of models is reviewed that involve eigenvalue problems as their common characteristic EFA is extended to confirmatory factor analysis CFA by including restrictions on the parameters of the factor analysis model and next by relating the factors to background variables These models are all structural equation models SEMs a very general and important class of models with the LISREL model as its best known representation encompassing almost all linear equation systems with latent variables Estimation of SEMs can be viewed as an application of the generalized method of moments GMM GMM in general and for SEM in particular is discussed at great length including the generality of GMM optimal weighting conditional moments continuous updating simulation estimation the link with the method of maximum likelihood and in particular testing and model evaluation for GMM The discussion concludes with nonlinear models The emphasis is on polynomial models and models that are nonlinear due to a filter on the dependent variables like discrete choice models or models with ordered categorical variables
