Technology Transfer:

The Legal Barriers to Technology Transfer under the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change Chen Zhou, 2019-03-11 The book discusses climate technology transfer under the UNFCCC framework and China's relevant legislation and practices. It first explores the theoretical basis of climate change related technology transfer with a particular focus on the differences between climate technology transfer and business as usual performance. The book then reviews practices of both technology supplier and user in order to generally identify potential legal barriers and obstacles. Finally, it sheds light on China, providing a comprehensive assessment on barriers that hinder the trans boundary transfers of low carbon technologies and need to be overcome in the future. The issues concerned involve two of the most dynamic areas in current China's lawmaking progress: environment laws and Intellectual Property laws. The book provides an in-depth analysis on China's legislation and practices in this regard. At the international level, the legal framework of climate technology transfer is examined in a systematic, prudent, and constructive manner. On this basis, the book highlights potential common consistency and possible coordination between the UNFCCC and the WTO regime. This book is accessible to both Chinese and international environmental law specialists. It appeals to a broad readership including environmental scientists, economists concerned with China's intellectual property law, foreign investment law, and anyone interested in the topic: how to green intellectual property rights regime for climate technology transfer in the China context. University Technology Transfer

Tom Hockaday, 2020-04-07 Demystifying technology transfer, an increasingly important but little understood aspect of research universities' mission. How do we transfer the brilliance of university research results into new products, services, and medicines to benefit society? University research is creating the technologies of tomorrow in the fields of medicine, engineering, information technology, robotics, and artificial intelligence. These early stage technologies need investment from existing and new businesses to benefit society. But how do we connect university research outputs with business and investors? This process, Tom Hockaday explains, is what university technology transfer is all about: identifying, protecting, and marketing university research outputs in order to shift opportunities from the university into business. In this detailed introductory book, a comprehensive overview and guide to the subject, Hockaday, an internationally recognized technology transfer expert, offers up his insider observations, opinions, and suggestions about university technology transfer. He also explains how to develop, strategically operate, and fund university technology transfer offices while behaving in accordance with the central mission of the university. Aimed at people who work in or with university technology transfer offices, as well as anyone who wants to learn the basics of what is involved, University Technology Transfer speaks to a global audience. Tackling a complex topic in clear language, the book reveals the impressive scale of patenting, licensing, and spin-out company creation, while also demonstrating that university technology transfer is a commercial activity with benefits that go well beyond the opportunity to make money. East-West Technology Transfer, 1984 International Science and Technology
