Douglas Arnold, 2013-10-31 Congress the Press and Political Accountability is the first large scale examination of how local media outlets cover members of the United States Congress Douglas Arnold asks do local newspapers provide the information citizens need in order to hold representatives accountable for their actions in office In contrast with previous studies which largely focused on the campaign period he tests various hypotheses about the causes and consequences of media coverage by exploring coverage during an entire congressional session Using three samples of local newspapers from across the country Arnold analyzes all coverage over a two year period every news story editorial opinion column letter and list First he investigates how twenty five newspapers covered twenty five local representatives and next how competing newspapers in six cities covered their corresponding legislators Examination of an even larger sample sixty seven newspapers and 187 representatives shows why some newspapers cover legislators more thoroughly than do other papers Arnold then links the coverage data with a large public opinion survey to show that the volume of coverage affects citizens awareness of representatives and challengers The results show enormous variation in coverage Some newspapers cover legislators frequently thoroughly and accessibly Others some of them famous for their national coverage largely ignore local representatives The analysis also confirms that only those incumbents or challengers in the most competitive races and those who command huge sums of money receive extensive coverage The Washington Law Reporter, 1884 The Government/Press Connection Stephen Hess, 2010-12-01 This book surveys press relations with the federal government examines the way official press offices prepare and conduct briefings and considers criticisms concerning the government's control of information Journalism week, 1926. the U S government for the American commercial news media His book is based on interviews with reporters and editors and on responses to questionnaires from nearly half of the over 1 200 American reporters in Washington Analysis of these responses and comparison with the content and placement of over 2 000 of these reporters news stories permit an unusual and sometimes startling perspective on Washington newswork Mr Hess demonstrates for instance how information in the news regularly comes from the legislative branch of the government despite the greater number of stories on the presidency and he shows that Washington news dominates the front pages of daily newspapers across the country no matter how little may be going on in the nation s capital The author concludes that Washington news gathering fragments media power while at the same time it shifts decisions on what is news and how it should be covered to the reporters The import of this impression is that reporters are not simply passing along information they are choosing within certain limits what most people will know about government The freedom given and assumed by these news workers affects the shape of national affairs
