Vygotsky and Special Needs Education Harry Daniels, Mariane Hedegaard, 2011-02-17 This is an international guide to using Vygotsky s theories to support children and schools in special needs education After Piaget Vygotsky is perhaps the most important educational theorist of the twentieth century Support for schools and pupils with additional needs has been theorised in a number of ways over the last 100 years and much interest has been shown in the development and relevance of Vygotsky s ideas It is ironic therefore that so little has been written about the practical application of such a perspective to the field This book brings together researchers working in the UK and Denmark to reflect on the benefits to be had from taking such a stance on support for children and schools All the contributors are connected with work that has been done at PPUK and CSAT research centres at the universities of Copenhagen and Bath Both centres enjoy strong reputations for their contributions to cultural historical theory The authors pursue issues raised by a post Vygotskian approach and which make important contributions to the development of the fields of policy and practice

The End of Composition Studies David W Smit, 2007-03-29 Setting forth an innovative new model for what it means to be a writing teacher in the era of writing across the curriculum The End of Composition Studies urges a reconceptualization of graduate work in rhetoric and composition systematically critiques the limitations of current pedagogical practices at the postsecondary level and proposes a reorganization of all academic units David W Smit calls into question two major assumptions of the field that writing is a universal ability and that college level writing is foundational to advanced learning Instead Smit holds writing involves a wide range of knowledge and skill that cannot be learned solely in writing classes but must be acquired by immersion in various discourse communities in and out of academic settings The End of Composition Studies provides a compelling rhetoric and rationale for eliminating the field and reenvisioning the profession as truly interdisciplinary a change that is necessary in order to fulfill the needs and demands of students instructors administrators and our democratic society
