Canadian Bolsheviks Ian Angus, 2004 Canadian communism did not spring out of the ground suddenly at the end of World War I and it was not smuggled into the country by Russian agents. The men and women who built the new movement were long-time socialist and labour militants in Canada. Inspired by the Russian Revolution and by their own experiences as leaders of the post-war labour revolt in Canada, they set about to create a new kind of party, one that could lead the fight for workers' power. The new Communist Party formed between 1919 and 1921 quickly became the largest party on the left with strong roots and influence in the unions and basic industry. Its members led heroic strikes. They fought for labor unity and engaged in united electoral activity with other currents in the workers' movement. They were in the forefront of the struggle for democratic rights.

The October Revolution in Prospect and Retrospect John Marot, 2012-06-08 In a series of probing analytical essays, John Marot tracks the development of Bolshevism through the prism of pre-1917 intra-Russian Social Democratic controversies in politics and philosophy. For 1917, the author presents a critique of social-historical interpretation of the Russian Revolution. Turning to NEP Russia, the author applies Robert Brenner's analysis of pre-capitalist modes of production and concludes that neither Bukharin nor Trotsky's NEP-premised programs of economic transformation and advance toward socialism were feasible. At the same time, he rejects the view that Stalinism was pre-destined to supplant NEP. Instead, he hypothesizes that the superior alternative to Stalinism was NEP without collectivization and the Five-Year Plans, an outcome that would have been possible had Bukharin and Trotsky joined forces to stop Stalin.

After Lenin; the New Phase in Russia Michael S. Farbman, 1924

The Tragedy of the Chinese Revolution Harold Isaacs, 2010 The story of contemporary China typically dates back to Mao's 1949 revolution. But in this classic work, Harold R. Isaacs uncovers how workers and peasants struggled for a different kind of revolution, one built from the bottom up in the 1920s. The defeat of their heroic efforts profoundly shaped the further course of modern Chinese history.

Zombie Capitalism Chris Harman, 2010 We've been told for years that the capitalist free market is a self-correcting perpetual growth machine in which sellers always find buyers, precluding any major crisis in the system. Then the credit crunch of August 2007 turned into the great crash of September-October 2008, leading one apologist for the system, Willem Buiter, to write of the end of capitalism as we knew it. As the crisis unfolded, the world witnessed the way in which the runaway speculation of the shadow banking system wreaked havoc on world markets, leaving real human devastation in its wake. Faced with the financial crisis, some economic commentators began to talk of zombie banks, financial institutions that were in an undead state and incapable of fulfilling any positive function but a threat to everything else. What they do not realize is that twenty-first-century capitalism as a whole is a zombie system, seemingly dead when it comes to achieving human goals.
