modern edition of our poems except Dr Grosart's 62 copies is that published at Manchester in 1896 by the Spenser Society. It consists of about 200 copies and is a reprint of the edition of 1635 which differs in several unimportant respects from the text of the edition of 1594. I shall always quote from the latter. Dr Grosart's introduction in which he acknowledges the previous work done by J. Payne Collier, Sir Walter C. Trevelyan, Dr Ingleby and Miss L. Toulmin Smith is the basis on which I have worked and I have acquired from his executors the sole right of reprinting his 1880 volume. The full title of the poem is as follows: 1. Willobie his Avis, or the true Picture of a Modest Maid and of a chaste and constant wife. In Hexameter verse the like argument whereof was never heretofore published. The introduction is supposed to be written by one Hadrian Dorrell writing from his chamber in Oxford this first of October. The fact is that the poem was entered in the Registers of Stationers' Hall on September 3rd 1594 while Shakespeare's Rape of Lucrece had been entered on May 9th of the same year. Hadrian Dorrell tells us that his very good friend and chamber fellow Mr Henry Willobie a young man and a scholar of very good hope being desirous to see the fashions of other countries for a time departed voluntarily to her Majesties.
