The Alien Animals:

The Alien Animals George Laycock, American Museum of Natural History, 1966 The Alien Animals George Laycock, 1966 The Zoologist's Guide to the Galaxy Arik Kershenbaum, 2021-03-16 From a noted Cambridge zoologist a wildly fun and scientifically sound exploration of what alien life must be like using universal laws that govern life on Earth and in space Scientists are confident that life exists elsewhere in the universe Yet rather than taking a realistic approach to what aliens might be like we imagine that life on other planets is the stuff of science fiction The time has come to abandon our fantasies of space invaders and movie monsters and place our expectations on solid scientific footing But short of aliens landing in New York City how do we know what they are like Using his own expert understanding of life on Earth and Darwin's theory of evolution which applies throughout the universe Cambridge zoologist Dr Arik Kershenbaum explains what alien life must be like how these creatures will move socialize and communicate For example by observing fish whose electrical pulses indicate social status we can see that other planets might allow for communication by electricity As there was evolutionary pressure to wriggle along a sea floor Earthling animals tend to have left right symmetry on planets where creatures evolved in midair or in soupy tar they might be lacking any symmetry at all Might there be an alien planet with supersonic animals A moon where creatures have a language composed of smells Will aliens scream with fear act honestly or have technology The Zoologist's Guide to the Galaxy answers these questions using the latest science to tell the story of how life really works on Earth and in space Alien Animals George Laycock, 1970-07-12 Cracking the CBEST, 2nd Edition Rick Sliter, 2002 The CBEST is required for teacher certification in California and Oregon Each new teacher must receive certification which means that they must pass the CBEST This book shows them how Forest Certification Daniel J Vogt, Bruce C Larson, John C Gordon, Anna Fanzeres, 1999-11-29 Forest certification has been widely accepted as a tool that would encourage industrial and non industrial management of resources in an environmentally acceptable socially beneficial and economically viable manner Much has been written on certification yet five issues have been missing which this book addresses an analysis of the scientific basis for the certification standards a formal and mechanistic incorporation of social and natural system sustainability as part of the standards the rationale for the different sets of standards that are currently being used to certify governmental industrial and non industrial organizations the success of the different sets of standards in assessing the environmental acceptability social benefits and economic viability of the managed system and the difficulty of certifying small landowners with current protocols Forest Certification examines the historical roots of forest certification the factors that guide the development of certification protocols the players involved in certification the factors determining the customers to be certified and the benefits of certification The book also covers the terminology and other issues intrinsic to certification that direct the structure of standards the similarities between indicators of different human disturbances within the ecosystem landscape and certification standards and finally a case study evaluating the strengths and weaknesses of existing certification protocols Forest Certification is unique in its analysis of the scientific basis for the structure of the forest certification protocols It documents the roles of human values in the development of assessment protocols but demonstrates how elements of existing protocols should be used to produce non value based standards

People and Wildlife Becky Thomas,Mark Fellowes,2020-10-07 We live in a world filled with fascinating plants and animals each adapted to environments that range from freezing arctic tundras to humid tropical forests Our world is also home to more than seven billion people a number added to every day Each of us puts pressure on the environment and the space left for wildlife At its most extreme every aspect of the environment has been influenced by people s choices and nowhere more so than the urban areas where most people live Urban areas are full of people playing and working They are also full of animals and plants often living secret lives that go unnoticed Our interactions with wildlife are often determined by our desire to get close to nature or sometimes our fear of it When people think of urban areas they mostly imagine big cities but these areas extend into more suburban environments made up of houses gardens roads and parks These landscapes are often filled with wildlife that represent a combination of local plants and animals with species from other places that are planted or escaped creating a unique habitat linked directly with the people who live there There are many challenges for the species found here but many opportunities too People can individually affect the environment for example by owning pet cats who are like mini tigers preying on the local birds or by leaving out trash and drawing in herds of peccaries or families of raccoons But it is in combination that we have the greatest impact For example houses and street lamps generate lots of light noise which can distract moths from their usual habits and the roads and streets we build divide up the habitat making it harder for wildlife to move around and find resources We in turn are also affected by the environment living in nature filled areas can positively affect our health and our well being yet interactions with certain species like ticks or mosquitoes can bring disease or discomfort Scientists and citizen scientists expert members of the public around the world are exploring our interactions with wildlife and nature in urban areas and here we explore some of this research This collection of articles aims to highlight some of the amazing wildlife that live alongside us and we explore how we can positively and negatively affect these species
