The Seminole Way Debbie A. Heaton, 2002-10 Everyone hopes and dreams that someday they will run across a hidden treasure somewhere unexpected A treasure that will change their life for the better or bring much joy and happiness into their world Treasures can be described as many different things The most common would be something that holds great monetary value But some treasures are worth so much more when they hold no monetary value at all While Tatum is going through a difficult divorce and other troubling experiences in her life she starts doubting things that she's always believed in wholeheartedly Such as her beliefs that love will always be strong enough to overcome any obstacle thrown its way the faith she has always had that happy endings will come to those who do what is right no matter what the sacrifice Her heart is broken and an accident leaves her with serious doubts and fears about her family's future With perfect timing a treasure of sorts finds its way to her Not realizing at first the significance of her discovery she pays little attention Soon her curiosity and the odd emotional pull of her find begins to unfold a wonderfully touching chapter in her life Events that she can not explain nor deny take place With the development of a very unconventional and unforgettable friendship she becomes aware that love truly has no boundaries Not in life not after death or in any way is love bound by worldly limitations Tatum has the pleasure of seeing firsthand the kind of impact that true and undying love can have on peoples lives Even from beyond the
