Tuberculosis Guide for Low Income Countries Donald Enarson, Hans L. Rieder, Thuridur Arnadottir, 1994

Management of Tuberculosis Donald A. Enarson, 2000 WHO consolidated guidelines on tuberculosis World Health Organization, 2022-08-12

One of the targets of the Sustainable Development Goals SDGs for the period 2015-2030 is to end the global TB epidemic. In line with this target, the WHO End TB Strategy approved by the World Health Assembly in 2014 calls for a 90% reduction in TB deaths and an 80% decrease in the TB incidence rate by 2030. The strategy emphasizes the need for prevention across all approaches, including infection prevention and control (IPC) in health care services and other settings where the risk of Mycobacterium tuberculosis transmission is high. IPC practices are vital to reduce the risk of M tuberculosis transmission by reducing the concentration of infectious droplet nuclei in the air and the exposure of susceptible individuals to such aerosols. Initial WHO recommendations on TB IPC focused primarily on decreasing the risk of transmission in health care facilities in resource-limited settings (17, 18). These initial recommendations were then expanded in 2009 to provide further guidance on the use of specific measures for health care facilities, congregate settings, and households. After the 2009 guidelines had been in effect for almost 10 years, the need for an update was anticipated to provide a revised evidence assessment reinforcing earlier recommendations and linking to core components of effective IPC programmes overall. The present updated guidelines also stress the importance of implementing IPC measures in a systematic and objective way that prioritizes consideration of the hierarchy of IPC controls.

Guidelines on the Management of Latent Tuberculosis Infection WHO, World Health Organization, 2015-01-15

BACKGROUND Latent tuberculosis infection (LTBI) is defined as a state of persistent immune response to prior acquired Mycobacterium tuberculosis antigens without evidence of clinically manifested active TB. It affects about one-third of the world's population. Approximately 10% of people with LTBI will develop active TB disease in their lifetime, with the majority developing it within the first five years after initial infection. Currently available treatments have an efficacy ranging from 60% to 90%. Systematic testing and treatment of LTBI in at-risk populations is a critical component of WHO's eight-point framework adapted from the End TB Strategy to target pre-elimination and ultimately elimination in low-incidence countries.

OVERVIEW Recognizing the importance of expanding the response to LTBI, in 2014 WHO developed Guidelines on the Management of Latent Tuberculosis Infection The guidelines are primarily targeted at high income or upper middle income countries with an estimated TB incidence rate of less than 100 per 100 000 population because they are most likely to benefit from it due to their current TB epidemiology and resource availability The overall objective of the guidelines is to provide public health approach guidance on evidence based practices for testing treating and managing LTBI in individuals with the highest risk of progression to active disease Specific objectives include identifying and prioritizing at risk population groups for targeted intervention of LTBI testing and treatment including defining an algorithm and recommending specific treatment options The guidelines are expected to provide the basis and rationale for the development of national guidelines for LTBI management based on available resources epidemiology of TB including intensity of transmission the health care delivery system of the country and other national and local determinants
