Recasting History Monica MacDonald, 2019-06-15 Since 1952 CBC television has played a unique role as the primary mass media purveyor of Canadian history Yet until now there have been no comprehensive accounts of Canadian history on television Monica MacDonald takes us behind the scenes of the major documentaries and docudramas broadcast on the CBC including in Explorations 1956 64 and the series Images of Canada 1972 76 The National Dream 1974 The Valour and the Horror 1992 and Canada A People s History 2000 02 Drawing on a wide range of sources MacDonald explores how producers struggled to represent the Canadian past under a range of external and internal pressures Despite dramatic shifts in the writing of history over this period she determines that television themes and interpretations largely remained the same The greater change was in the production and presentation particularly in the role of professional historians as journalists emerged not only as the new producers of Canadian history on CBC television but also as the new content authorities A critique of public history through the lens of political economy Recasting History reveals the conflicts compromises and controversies that have shaped the CBC version of the Canadian past

Military History, 1992-04

Gotcha! George Bain, 1994 THERE IS ONE VIEW OF journalism generally accepted by reporters that portrays its practitioners as the objective guardians of the public trust as writers who are almost always on the side of right and as professionals who do not make the news only report it Then there's the other view which paints a slightly different picture According to this way of thinking members of the media do indeed play a significant role in shaping the public's opinions particularly about politicians and are often biased and judgemental in their daily assessments of these leaders and they also refuse to take full responsibility for their errors inconsistencies and distortions of the truth It is this latter perspective that is represented in Gotcha a hard hitting expose of the Canadian media by the journalist George Bain A veteran of the Ottawa press gallery where he covered politics for the Globe and Mail for many years and now a columnist on the media for Maclean's magazine Bain has a commonsense approach to the world and a writing style that has always been logical and easy to follow Bain's main thesis is simply this if we currently live in a country where politicians are disliked distrusted and in some cases reviled then it probably has a great deal to do with how journalists have presented politicians to the public for the past 15 years According to Bain among members of the media there is a discernible inbred anti-governmentalism that has permeated newspapers and television broadcasts for far too long Such an attitude has transformed political coverage into what Brian Mulroney referred to as gotcha journalism or what Bain labels issue making by entrapment

Mulroney's various troubles with the media from Tunagate to Sinclair Stevens serve as Bain's main examples of media unfairness and distortion but he also analyses the Globe and Mail's manufactured assault on the former Alberta premier Don Getty in a series of investigative articles published in 1990 and journalists' critical treatment of the former prime minister Kim Campbell. In marshalling his case on the media's dealings with Mulroney, Bain underplays the former prime minister's blustery style and his unfulfilled promises of a new cleaner government, both of which may have contributed to the contempt many journalists had for him. Nevertheless, in every so-called scandal that Bain examines, his evidence that the media got all or part of the various stories wrong is difficult to dispute. Canadian editors and journalists clearly have a lot to answer for. But will this book or any other significant commentary make a difference? Bain is not overly optimistic and rightly so. He suggests that more quality control be introduced into newsrooms and calls for a return to more coverage of Parliament. Unlike the politicians they write about and often condemn, however, journalists do not take criticism like this easily. As Bain concedes, his advice will be regarded not only as an intrusion into the media's private affairs but more important as an assault on the freedom of the press. And nothing, not even the truth at times, is more sacred than that. Canadian Saturday Night, 1995
