Whats Inside Buildings:

Powder-Post Beetles in Buildings: What to Do About Them T. McIntyre, R. A. St. George, 2020-03-16 In the illuminating anthology Powder Post Beetles in Buildings: What to Do About Them T. McIntyre and R. A. St. George curate a seminal collection that masterfully decodes the perplexing enigma of powder post beetle infestations. With an intricate balance of scientific acuity and engaging narrative, the collection explores a myriad of themes such as pest control, architectural preservation, and environmental stewardship. Within its pages, readers will encounter a tapestry of essays and studies, each contributing to a comprehensive understanding of these pernicious insects and their impact on buildings, offering a rich evaluative lens into the domain of entomology and its practical applications. The curators, McIntyre and St. George, have handpicked contributions from a diverse community of entomologists, conservationists, and architects, each bringing their unique expertise to bear on examining this issue. This anthology aligns with contemporary conservation efforts while drawing heavily on historical preservation techniques, enriching the discourse on sustainable building practices. Assembling both emerging and established voices from the field, this compilation not only broadens the spectrum of thought surrounding pest management but also bridges cultural and scientific dialogues, highlighting innovative solutions within a modern context. For scholars, professionals, and enthusiasts alike, Powder Post Beetles in Buildings offers a unique opportunity to explore an interdisciplinary intersection of science and practical intervention. This collection stands as an indispensable resource for those keen to understand not only the physiological and biological aspects of powder post beetles but also the socio-cultural implications of their management. Engage with this anthology to traverse a wealth of perspectives and insights, providing a well-rounded comprehension of the dialogue between nature and the built environment in one compelling volume. In this enriched edition, we have carefully created added value for your reading experience. Hand-picked Memorable Quotes shine a spotlight on moments of literary brilliance. Interactive footnotes clarify unusual references, historical allusions, and archaic phrases for an effortless, more informed read.

What Is at Stake in Building “Non-Western” International Relations Theory? Yong-Soo Eun, 2018-01-12 International Relations (IR) as a discipline is often deemed to be too Western-centric. It has been argued that much of mainstream IR theory is simply an abstraction of Western history. In this respect, many IR scholars have called for broadening the theoretical horizon of IR while problematising the Western parochialism of the discipline, and it is increasingly acknowledged that IR needs to embrace a wider range of histories, experiences, and theoretical perspectives, particularly those outside of the West. However, despite such a meaningful debate over broadening the theoretical and practical horizons of IR, several critical questions remain unclear and under-explored. For example, does IR need to embrace pluralism? If so, how much? To what extent, and in what sense, is IR parochial? Should IR promote dialogue across theoretical and spatial divides? If so, how? Yong-Soo Eun addresses these questions. He undertakes a literature review and an empirical analysis of the extent to which the field has actually become diverse and pluralistic. This investigation considers diversity beyond the current limited focus on the geographical origins of theory Yong Soo also draws attention to the mechanisms and processes of knowledge production and transmission in IR More importantly he addresses what is probably the most acute issue associated with the non Western IR theory building enterprise namely fragmentation and dialogue In conclusion Yong Soo notes that the role of unsettling the present hierarchical structure of the discipline falls to reflexive individual agents He argues that in order for their agential power to be more fully harnessed in the opening up of IR critical self reflection and collective empathy and collaboration among marginalised scholars are all essential

Building Engineering and Systems Design Frederick S. Merritt,2012-12-06 Practical Considerations for Public Participation in Constitution-Building What, When, How and Why? Erin C. Houlihan and Sumit Bisarya,2021-07-26 Public participation has become a core element of modern constitution building Robust participation is credited with a range of benefits from improving individual behaviours and attitudes to democracy to shaping elite bargaining dynamics improving constitutional content and strengthening outcomes for democracy and peace Yet it is not well understood whether and how public participation can achieve these ends Much of what we think we know about participatory constitution building remains theoretical No two processes are alike and there is no agreed definition of what constitutes a participatory process Yet national decision makers must contend with the key question What does a robust participation process look like for a particular country at a particular time in a particular context What considerations and principles can be derived from comparative experience to guide decisions This Policy Paper unpacks the forms and functions of public participation across different stages of the constitution building process and considers the ways in which public engagement can influence the dynamics of the process including political negotiations
