The Alaska Pipeline:

The Alaska Pipeline Virginia O. Shumaker, 1979 Discusses the building of the Alaska pipeline focusing on the problems involved and how they were overcome The Trans-Alaska Pipeline Controversy Peter A. Coates, 1991 In 1977 oil began to flow south from the Arctic through the controversial Trans Alaska Pipeline System TAPS This study considers the TAPS proposal and controversy as an extension even a culmination of established processes policies and attitudes within Alaska history American environmental history and the history of conservation Annotation copyrighted by Book News Inc Portland OR 800 Miles to Valdez James P. Roscow, 1977 The actual building of the line is described and the controversial issues of environmental impact timing planning and accountability are discussed Annual Report of the Alaska Pipeline Commission Alaska Pipeline Commission, Checks and Balances Jethro Koller Lieberman, 1981 Illustrates the complex workings of the system of checks and balances by examining the building of the Alaska pipeline which involved the federal government a state government and the actions of private citizens The Management, Planning, and Construction of the Trans-Alaska Pipeline System Terry F. Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, 1969 Project Description of the Trans Alaska Pipeline System Alyeska Pipeline Service Company, 1971 Proposed Alaska Natural Gas Pipelines, 2004 Natural gas finds associated with oil production on the Alaska North Slope are a large national resource whose use is restricted because of the very high cost of delivering this gas to markets Congress authorized construction of a pipeline in 1976 and President Carter selected a route to follow the existing Alaska oil pipeline and the Alaska Highway So far the Alaska pipeline has not been considered commercially feasible although two separate consortia have recently filed project applications with the state of Alaska Meanwhile plans are moving ahead to build a pipeline via a Canadian route to bring gas from the Mackenzie River delta to the major North American markets Both Houses of Congress approved legislation in 2002 and again in 2003 to encourage development of a pipeline An 18 billion loan guarantee for constructing the Alaska natural gas pipeline was initially included on the Senate side and adopted as part of the conference report on H R 6 the Energy Policy Act of 2003 H Rept 108 375 The conference report was approved on November 18 2003 in the House but the Senate failed to close debate on the bill during the first session Congress did pass and the President signed the FY 2004 comprehensive appropriations bill P L 108 199 which contains a provision that could extend the loan guarantee to construction of facilities to liquefy Alaska natural gas including ships to transport this product to the U S West Coast if the loan guarantee provision itself becomes law The 2002 Senate approved bill included a price support mechanism to insure a price floor for Alaskan gas in the U S market This same bill was re approved in the Senate in 2003 but the House has never voted for the price support mechanism and it is not in the H R 6 conference report The Bush Administration opposes the price floor provision The Canadian government has also expressed its opposition to any policy of government intervention that would disfavor Canadian natural gas in the U S market

If a pipeline were to be built it would provide a significant boost to demand for steel in North America as the American Iron and Steel Institute AISI estimates that 3 to 5 million tons of steel could be required depending on the route and design of the pipeline and that up to 14 000 work years could be generated in the steel and pipe industry AISI believes that sufficient capacity exists or can be readily developed in North America for manufacturing the necessary steel pipe H R 6 contains a sense of Congress resolution that North American steel should be used in the project ExxonMobil Corporation one of the three developers of Alaska North Slope oil and gas has announced an agreement with two Japanese companies to commercialize a new type of steel that could reduce Alaska pipeline costs This report explores the economic and industry tradeoffs inherent in current efforts to commercialize Alaska North Slope natural gas and the impact on the steel industry The report will be updated as warranted Trans-Alaska Pipeline United States.
