

1890-1910 THE GLASGOW STYLE

Consistent with the more familiar conditions of the Renaissance, the Glasgow Style was developed during the late 19th century by a group from the Glasgow School of Art. Charles Rennie Mackintosh, Herbert MacNair, Margaret Macdonald and Frances Macdonald, often known as "the four", were heavily influenced by the simplicity found in Japanese prints.

This group introduced a geometric style that balanced and tempered floral and curvilinear elements with a strong vertical structure. Much of the work of the four is characterized by symbolic imagery and subdued forms. Unlike those in vogue at the time, they seldom used bright colors. They utilized bold, simple outlines that defined planes of color.

Much of their work has a strong vertically and abstract compositions of the Russian form. Charles Rennie Mackintosh made significant contributions to architecture and interior design. His focus on verticality and an total environment. Mackintosh's own design theme was an emphasis on the vertical. Glasgow Style was an important transition to the modernism of the 20th century.

—THE GLASGOW GIRLS—

Because historically we live in a male-centric society, much of the history about the Glasgow Style has been directed towards Charles and Herbert Mackintosh. The two most prominent women of the Glasgow Style are sisters Margaret and Frances, who married MacNair and MacNair, respectively. Margaret was the artist and the better known sister. Despite being considered the heart of the Glasgow Style, MacNair's work is often overlooked. Margaret's work was more focused on metal work and print, but while Margaret's work remained mainly decorative, Frances' work became more about community issues and had more of an ethical quality. Little work remains of Frances as her husband destroyed much of it after her death.
