

Scientific Attitudes

- Characteristics that are part of a scientific attitude include curiosity, honesty, open-mindedness, skepticism, and creativity.
  - Curiosity is what drives a scientist to ask questions that no one has thought of before.
  - Honesty requires that scientists report their findings truthfully.
  - Open-mindedness helps a scientist to accept new and different ideas. At the same time, scientists are skeptical—they doubt an idea until it has been fully tested.
  - Creativity helps scientists come up with new ways of solving problems.
